Nazis Claim Great Iron Area Seized In Ukraine

Krivoi Rog Taken

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), Aug. 15.—Crediting Italian, Rumanian and Hungarian allies with assists, the German high command last night claimed encirclement of Odessa and Nikolaev, Black Sea ports, within a wide-swinging offensive that planted the swastika in the iron center of Krivoi Rog, half-way across the southern Ukraine.

Krivoi Rog was said to have been occupied by German speed troops. It lies in the basin of the lower Dnieper River, a scant 150 miles from the Sea of Azov to the southeast.

The announcement was the first official intimation that German land forces were getting close to Dnepropetrovsk, the great industrial center which the Germans call "the Essen of the Ukraine." Krivoi Rog lies some 80 miles southwest of Dnepropetrovsk.

With the fall of Krivoi Rog, the high command said, Russia lost 81 per cent of her iron ore production.

Advance Continues, Nazis Say

The Hitler headquarters pictured Odessa encircled by Rumanian troops, Nikolaev caught in a vise by Germans and Hungarians, and a German-Hungarian-Italian force "irresistibly advancing" southward between the Dniester and Dnieper Rivers.

Germans and Rumanians were said to have reached the Black Sea between the Port of Odessa and the Bug River estuary in a "continuous, relentless pursuit" and Russian forces, trapped by the advance, were reported preparing to try a Dunkerque-like withdrawal by sea.

"The air force Thursday struck severe blows against transports held in readiness for the flight of Soviet troops in the coastal areas off Odessa and Nikolaev," said the army's report. "Two transports totaling 14,000 tons were destroyed and five other large ships were badly damaged."

Another report said that seven merchant vessels were sunk and 17 others damaged by the Luftwaffe in Black Sea ports.

New 'Dunkerque' Reported

D. N. B. said 110 Russian planes had been destroyed in the past 24 hours.

[Another "Dunkerque" was reported developing at the northern coast of Lake Ladoga, near the Finnish frontier, with Russian forces

(Beaverbrook and His Job, Page 8.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's highpowered minister of supply, arrived in Washington yesterday to seek a greater and more swiftly-moving supply of war materials under the Lend-Lease Act.

He landed at Bolling Field at 12:45 p. m. in an American-made bomber with British markings after taking part in the history-making conference on the high seas between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. About this, the Canadian-born "press lord" maintained a tantalizing silence. He would only say that he had attended the conference as minister of supply and that, as "a citizen of this continent," he had been deeply moved by the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration.

Although he has been a member of the British Parliament since he made $5,000,000 at the age of 31, Lord Beaverbroow talks American, slang and all.

"You ask why I am here," he said, grinning. "I'm the biggest buyer on the cuff you have ever seen."

Lord Beaverbrook held forth at a press conference on the south porch of the British Embassy, whither he had gone after his arrival. Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, sat alongside of him. The embassy dachshund was stretched out at Beaverbrook's feet.

"Inexhaustible" Need

Pressed for details about the dramatic Roosevelt-Churchill conference, Lord Beaverbrook did admit that he had touched at Newfoundland. A dispatch from London last night disclosed that his flight was attended by tragedy. The plane which carried him across the Atlantic, according to the dispatch, was a companion plane to one which crashed into a British hillside Sunday night, with a loss of 22 lives. The Beaverbrook plane flew on.

Lord Beaverbrook told reporters that Britain's need of planes and tanks was "inexhaustible."

He declined to say whether Britain would need American manpower.

"Your entry into the war is something that I am not going to discuss," he said. "You have been most generous and for that I am grateful."

When the question was put to him a second time, he emphasized that he was the British supply minister and had nothing to say about manpower.

"Faith and Understanding"

"I will neither acknowledge the necessity nor deny it," he said. "I am not going to enlarge on that. It is something that you have given us your faith and understanding. We have been facing a dreadful situation, a situation endangering our lives and our homes, and if we didn't need help we wouldn't be asking for it."

Asked about diverting war supplies to Russia, Lord Beaverbrook said:

"Russia is fighting a magnificent battle. The Russians are a brave people, a warlike race. We have already given considerable supplies

Parley at Sea Believed to Have Devised United Strategic Stand

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill entwined their people's destinies yesterday for "final destruction of the Nazi tyranny," agreeing in a meeting at sea on eight principles for building a postwar world.

Immediate expectations of bold steps to expand this country's economic pressure and British and Russian land and air assaults on the Axis arose around the world.

At "several conferences" somewhere on the Atlantic, flanked by their military chiefs, the American President and the British war leader mapped their plan of action for beating Hitler and, if need be, Japan.

They talked over the question of supplies for Soviet Russia as well as for Britain.

They reached decisions on prosecution of the war that will change the course of history in Europe, Asia and the Americas.

Their joint statement of peace aims, though monumental in importance, was only one of many agreements they made.

Unanswered was the question whether the face-to-face conference had made the United States something more than an "arsenal of democracy."

Facts about the meeting itself, unrivaled for sheer drama even by the Brenner Pass conferences between Hitler and Mussolini, were slow in coming to light. President Roosevelt, however, was expected to

Russo-Nazi War Has Gone Awry, Tokyo Paper Says

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 14.—The Japan Times Advertiser, foreign affairs organ, devoted its daily editorial today to emphasizing that all original calculations regarding the Russo-German war have gone awry and that the outcome of that war is unpredictable. It then continues: "Out of the confusion and chaos that have enveloped the Soviet front, the new light of truth seems to be emerging. It is now necessary to make a reassessment of the war situation there and cast about for bearings from a new angle."

Senate Accepts House Version Of Draft Bill

Action Precludes 2d Precarious Vote In Lower Chamber

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday took only 20 minutes to complete Congressional action on legislation which extends by 18 months the military service of selectees, National Guardsmen, reservists and enlisted men of the Regular Army.

By a vote of 37 to 19 the Senate accepted the House version of the service extension bill. The resolution now awaits President Roosevelt's signature.

Capitol officials said the bill might be flown to Mr. Roosevelt to be signed at sea or in port immediately after the return from his history-making conference with Prime Minister Churchill.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, in an appeal last month for swift Congressional approval of the bill, stated that any delay beyond August 1 would seriously interfere with the Army's plans for troop movements.

Another House Vote Avoided

The Senate passed the 18-month extension bill a week ago yesterday by a vote of 45 to 30. Similar legislation, differing from the Senate bill only in minor details, squeezed through the House Tuesday on a 203-202 roll call.

By accepting the House version of the legislation the Senate yester-

Text of Joint Declaration On Anglo-U. S. Peace Aims

The text of the announcement on the meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain follows:

The President of the United States and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing his majesty's government in the United Kingdom, have met at sea.

They have been accompanied by officials of their two governments, including high ranking officers of their military, naval and air services.

The whole problem of the supply of munitions of war, as provided by the Lend-Lease Act, for the armed forces of the United States and for those countries actively engaged in resisting aggression has been further examined.

Lord Beaverbrook, the minister of supply of the British government, has joined in these conferences. He is going to proceed to Washington to discuss further details with appropriate officials of the United States Government. These conferences will also cover the supply problems of the Soviet Union.

The President and the Prime Minister have had several conferences. They have considered the dangers to world civilization arising from the policies of military domination by conquest upon which the Hitlerite government of Germany and other governments associated therewith have embarked, and have made clear the stress (as received here by radio the text said "stress" but Stephen Early, White House secretary, said it might have been garbled and that the word possibly was "steps") which their countries are respectively taking for their safety in the face of these dangers.

They have agreed upon the following joint declaration:

Joint declaration of the President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing his majesty's government in the United Kingdom, being met together, deem it right to make known certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world.

First, their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other;

Second, they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned;

Third, they respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live, and they wish to see sovereign rights and self government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them;

Fourth, they will endeavor, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all states, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity;

Fifth, they desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing, for all, improved labor standards, economic advancement and social security;

Sixth, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the

U.S. Has Joined United Front, British Feel

Expect Mutual Effort To Halt Japan, Block Africa to Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 14.—Three supreme American commitments to the world—to help reconstruct postwar Europe, to support the British and Russians on every front, and to aid in stripping aggressor nations of their weapons—were made in the joint declaration of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, informed London comment held today.

These, among all others, said British informants, stood out in the eight points stating a common and solemn resolve for "a better future for the world"— a democratic manifesto to the nations and peoples of the earth.

But great and grave implications were seen as well in what was left unsaid; in what had been decided by President and prime minister in a meeting without precedent somewhere on the Atlantic.

Russia Knew of Talks

An informant at the Russian Embassy said tonight that Russia had been kept informed throughout the Roosevelt-Churchill conference and that Moscow was "very, very happy about the results."

Some observers called the agreement a grand united stand, extending from Malaya to Alaska, which had instantly and sharply braked, if it had not actually forestalled, Japanese advances in the south Pa-

Taking No Chance

Ring of Ships Kept Guard On Conferees

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 14.—A constantly moving circle of destroyers, patrol boats and other small warships formed a precautionary defensive ring around the Roosevelt-Churchill conference ship, and American planes droned overhead, the Daily Mail said today in a dispatch from its correspondent "somewhere on the American Atlantic coast."

Correspondent Walter Farr said President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill sat on the sunlit deck of the ship "with seagulls wheeling around."

"Occasionally the drone of a big American flying boat patroling the skies was heard," Farr wrote. "The Navy was taking no chance."

Apparently Near U. S.

From these descriptions the British concluded the conferences took place close to the American shore.

Farr quoted a high American official who took part in the conversations as saying: "The President is the happiest looking man on earth today. At the conferences it was hard to tell which looked happier—the President or Mr. Churchill.

"They knew each other well by talking for months on the transatlantic telephone, so they were like two old friends meeting."

After the first "how-do-you-do?" Farr wrote, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill engaged in eager conversation.

"Officials left them and for more

British Air Crash Kills Purvis, Head Of Buying in U.S.

Montreal, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Right Honorable Arthur Purvis, director-general of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, has been killed in a flying accident in the United Kingdom, the ferry command of the Royal Air Force announced tonight.

A brief statement announcing the death of the Montreal industrialist indicated other casualties in the crash of what was described as "a returning transocean aircraft."

"All other passengers," the announcement said, "were members of the ferry command."

Mason Will Urge Congress To Put D. C. on Daylight Time

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner Guy Mason is anxious to press for legislation giving Washington daylight saving time.

He said yesterday the extra daylight hour at the end of a day's work would be a "welcome gift" to both District and Federal employes who are now laboring under a greater strain than ever before.

"There would be more time for play," he said, "and these are days when we all need as much relaxation as we can get."

The Commissioners, he added, have no authority to order a blanket time change for the entire city, but could make recommendations to Congress for a special law.

"I am in favor of that," Mason declared, "and if it should come to a vote among the Commissioners I would heartily urge such action."

Should daylight saving time be adopted in the Capital, it would mean a "tremendous saving" in electric power, a city spokesman declared.

The conservation of power was the President's principal reason for

'An Impudent Lie'

Berlin Calls Roosevelt's 8 Points 'Bad Plagiarism' of Wilson

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 14.—The German foreign office mouthpiece, Deutsche Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, tonight called the Roosevelt-Churchill program "a plagiarism of President Wilson's points—and a bad one at that."

The publication declared, "The plagiarism can find no drawing power because the authors are the same as those who deceived the world 25 years ago by a sham of promises not seriously intended."

In the first detailed German reaction to the British-American outline, the Korrespondenz went on: "It is an impudent lie when Churchill and Roosevelt maintain that their countries seek neither territorial nor any other kind of enrichment.

"As in the World War, England now aspires to make foreign peoples subject to her which want to be free. As for Roosevelt's policy, it is an important point of his program to acquire economic and military sovereignty not only on the Western Hemisphere but far beyond it.

"This sovereignty does not bother in the slightest about the wishes of interested peoples. They can be brought to reason in case of need

Senate Approves Arlington Site For War Building

By a margin of eight votes the Senate yesterday backed up the House in the selection of Arlington (Va.) Experimental Farm as a site for the new 35-million-dollar War Department Building.

The decision came at the end of two hours of argument and required three record votes and a quorum call. On the final vote on an amendment to cut the building appropriation in half as proposed by President Roosevelt, Republicans lined up almost solidly behind the White House.

Isolationists Critical, Others On Hill Approve Sea Parley

High praise for the Roosevelt-Churchill joint statement resounded on Capitol Hill yesterday, though there were some commentators who questioned whether the dramatic developments had not created a more belligerent role for the United States.

Belief that the statement would have a striking effect on the people of the world, including the Germans, was expressed, though some of the leading opponents of the Administration's foreign policy withheld comment for the time being.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, declared the pronouncement "gives positive and concrete evidence to the German people that Hitler cannot win." He added that "in fact the joint declaration "promises the German people more than Hitler does."

McCarran Dissents

On the other hand, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, told the Associated Press that the statement was made "on the unwarranted assumption that the United States is a belligerent in the war. . . . It is tantamount to a declaration of war by this country, which is the province of Congress only."

Two noninterventionist leaders—Senators Johnson (Republican), of California, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, declined to comment until they had made further study of the announcement. So too did Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, who only last week relinquished chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee to Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, noninterventionist, was out of the city.

Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, assistant minority leader, said the joint declaration was "very fine." He long has supported the Democratic Administration in its dealings with other countries.

Among the comments were these:

Senator Connally—"The joint statement was an expression of noble and lofty governmental conceptions of the right of each nation to have the government they desire, an dthe abolition of force. The statement that Great Britain intended no territorial conquest is in keeping with these theories. On the whole, the statement embodied concepts with which I feel sure the people of the United States are in agreement."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky—"The statement of principles and objectives will have the enthusiastic support of all peoples of the world who believe in freedom and democracy, and who are opposed to wars of aggression as instruments of national policy."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts—"The joint declaration by the President and the British Prime Minister commits the United States to full partnership with Great Britain, not only in the prosecution of the present war but in the prospective war in the Far East. . . . It is a commitment that goes far beyond the constitutional powers of the President and one that no other President in our history even presumed to assume."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida—"This is the best expression of the rights of man which has been made in a generation and the most significant. . . . For the first time, it emphasizes that the forces of right and freedom are rallying into a great front against which the gates of Hitler hell shall in no wise prevail.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado—"I am glad that the leaders of the United States and Great Britain held a man-to-man conference. I am glad that they made peace the keynote of their conference. The eight points will have a strong idealistic appeal.

Senator Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island—"It helps reassure the people of the world what we are contending for. There has been dissatisfaction among the people on both sides, some of them fearing that it was just a contest for power. The joint declaration assures them that we are contesting for a better world, for right, justice and equality among nations."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman Senate Military Affairs Committee—"Why don't Great Britain and the United States start imposing the four freedoms on India, Russia and other places right now? I'm not going to give one penny of the taxpayers' money to Stalin, who has burned all the churches in Russia, stamped out religion, and who has murdered Christians. The United States should look to her own troubles before sticking her nose into the troubles of other nations throughout the world."

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman House Foreign Affairs Committee—"The statement of the joint declaration of the President and the prime minister crystallizes the aims and aspirations in which all freedom-loving people are so closely joined."

Representative Short (Republican), Missouri, who led House opposition in fight on draft service extension—"The President is running true to form by taking action first and telling Congress about it later. It is quite apparent that some sort of alliance has been formed. I don't like these secret, undercover agreements. The President has no authority to form such an alliance."

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, who supported draft extension—"The declaration is an ideal toward which we might all strive. It is an approach to a difficult and vital problem."

Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, said he regarded the statement as "opening the way to genuine peace negotiations with the Axis powers."

Green Approves

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the Associated Press in Chicago: "It is my firm opinion that the members of the American Federation of Labor will give overwhelming and wholehearted support to the program agreed upon at the conference. It represents the basic requirements for an enduring world peace."

At Topeka, Kans., Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee, said in a statement the declaration "was a splendid statement on the future world we all would like to live in.

"But most Americans will be interested in knowing what commitments, if any, were made by the President of the United States to help bring about this new world."

Seventh, such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance;

Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential. Peace Aims Recall Wilson's 14 Points

President Wilson stated the 14 points that he considered essential to peace in an address to Congress January 8, 1918.

In brief they are:

1. Open treaties reached openly with international diplomacy conducted openly.
2. Freedom of the seas.
3. Free international trade.
4. Disarmament.
5. Impartial adjustment of colonial claims.
6. The evacuation of Russian territory.
7. The evacuation of Belgium.
8. The evacuation of French territory and the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.
9. A readjustment of the Italian frontiers according to nationalities.
10. Autonomous development for Austria and Hungary.
11. The evacuation of Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro with the establishment of security for the Balkan States.
12. The establishment of the sovereignty of Turkey along lines of nationality.
13. The establishment of an independent Poland.
14. The formation of a "general association of nations."

'Itler, the Blighter, 'As Got Something On 'Is 'Ands Now

London, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—In the words of the damp-bearded ale guzzler who blithely broke the sacred 3 p. m. closing law in the Falcon Pub to hear the secret that wasn't a secret:

"Blimey, that blighter 'itler's got something on 'is 'ands now."

For eight minutes this afternoon Britain called off its war effort to hear the deep, clear voice of Maj. Clement Attlee tell the news of the sea meeting of the fighting Prime Minister and the American President.

Factories and workshops closed. Ditch-diggers leaned on their shovels and listended

Typical comment in the queues gathered around radios was:

"If the United States are not actually fighting, they are in this show up to their necks. After the war, the world looks as if it will really be a place for heroes to live in."

Canada Puts Victory Ahead Of Statement of Peace Aims

By P. J. Philip.
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, Aug. 14.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today expressed on behalf of the Dominion of Canada full association with the declaration issued at the close of the Atlantic conference between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

"It is evidence of resolution in war," he said, "of a determination to destroy nazlism, and of the desire for a just, merciful and lasting peace."

The Canadian public's interest in the sensational meeting is still unsatisfied, however. What belligerent Canadians want to know is not so much what kind of peace it is hoped to establish after the war, as what is being done and will be done to win the war. They are pleased that Lord Beaverbrook, the British supply minister, a Canadian by birth, has gone to Washington to put the weight of his great energy behind the sending of armaments where they are most needed.

The Canadian people are satisfied there never has been and never will be any disagreement between them and the people of the United States or the British about what kind of world order they would like to see established and they are in full agreement on all the principles set forth in the eight points of the Atlantic communique.

There is, however, this difference between the Canadian people and the other nations of this continent—that they are at war and are vitally interested in winning the war as a prelude to making peace. In his emphasis on his interpretation of the Atlantic communique as indicating "determination to destroy nazlism" as the first step, King has interpreted rightly the feeling of his countrymen.

Interest in the conference, therefore, attaches mostly to that part which necessitated the attendance of high ranking officers of both the British and American military, naval and air services. It is obvious, it is said, that they were not there to help draw up these eight peace points.

It is also obvious that their discussions must have gone beyond questions of supply of munitions of war for Britain, for the United States or for any of those other countries engaged in resisting aggression.

While no one expects that any military secrets should be revealed, there is an inclination to ask where Canada stands in the war plans which were discussed at this conference between the head of the government of belligerent Great Britain and the head of the nonbelligerent United States. For that reason and others the absence of Prime Minister King from the conference is regretted and may be turned into a domestic issue.

Historic Conference Group Aboard Prince of Wales

Roosevelt Asked Sea Parley

By the Associated Press

Those familiar with President Roosevelt's great love of the sea inclined yesterday to the view that his unprecedented meeting with Prime Minister Churchill in the North Atlantic was Mr. Roosevelt's own idea.

At least once a year, the President has gone voyaging—to the Caribbean to fish, to the Pacific to review the fleet, to New England waters for a cruise or down to South America for a good will visit. Weekends when he can get away from his desk are spent on the yacht Potomac, sailing the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay.

His appreciation of a maritime background for dramatic events was clearly evidenced less than a year ago when he went out in the Potomac on Chesapeake Bay one rainy afternoon to welcome the British ambassador, Lord Halifax, to this country.

Sea Parley Held Culmination Of Old Roosevelt Desire

By Arthur Krock
Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 14.—In achieving an international conference at sea President Roosevelt has carried through an interesting and dramatic plan which has been steadily in his mind since the rise of Adolf Hitler began to threaten the peace of the world. Though what the President always conceived as a peace conference materialized as a war conference, the setting and the scene follow his original idea.

In 1936, when he was a candidate for a second term and international relations were going from bad to worse because of the policies being then established by Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini and the Japanese war party, the President's first sea conference plan began to evolve in his thoughts. As he saw it then: After his reelection, which by August was a certainty, perhaps a small group could meet somewhere at sea or in some quiet port such as is found in the Azores and lay enduring foundations for world peace.

The group he mentioned in conversation with friends always included the then King of Great Britain, Edward VIII; the President of France; Hitler and Mussolini. Occasionally he wondered aloud whether it would be possible to have present also Stalin and the Emperor of Japan. But everyone with whom the concept was discussed promptly said that, of course, Stalin could never be personally introduced to a gathering in which Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini would agree to appear.

In August, 1936, an outline of this Presidential plan or hope was published in the New York Times as a sample of Mr. Roosevelt's thinking, as one of the most interesting ideas which an American Pr sident had ever entertained, and as a possible prescription for world peace with which Mr. Roosevelt frequently and often seriously invested his mind. The publication created a storm of interest.

In 1938 and 1939 the President, who had never been able to see any practicable way to put his sea-going general peace conference into operation, began telling his friends of another idea. It was a meeting with Hitler somewhere in the Atlantic in an attempt to work out a formula whereby Germany could be satisfied without war. The President told at least two persons, who told this writer, that he had tried to send discreet feelers to Herr Hitler through Signor Mussolini, but had no luck with them.

The gist of these Presidential conversations was published in the New York Times in April, 1939, after whatever had been attempted had failed. Once again the President was bombarded with requests for comment.

Mr. Roosevelt was at Hyde Park when the publication appeared. He answered a press conference question concerning it by saying that he had read the story: "It is interesting and well-written but it is not true." Coming in this form, the denial was accepted in some quarters as a diplomatic one. To a visitor with whom the President later discussed the dispatch Mr. Roosevelt said the statement in the dispatch that he had sent the feelers "just before or after Munich" was incorrect as to timing.

Conference at Sea Forms U. S.-British Front to Crush Axis and Shape Peace

land on the New England coast within the next 24 hours, and would be asked for a word picture of the scene.

It was learned at the White House, however, that one of the meetings was held aboard the United States cruiser August and another on the British battleship Prince of Wales.

Lord Beaverbrook, British supply minister, attended the secret conference and met reporters here late yesterday, after flying to Washington by bomber. He refused, however, to disclose details of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting.

Presence of top military and supply chiefs of the two nations made the meeting a supreme British-American war council.

Americans who attended were understood to have included Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Corps; Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, representing Secretary Hull; W. Averell Harriman, lease-lend expediter in London for the President, and possibly Harry L. Hopkins, the President's lease-lend aide and confidante, who had just made a trip to London and Moscow.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, was believed to have attended Churchill.

The eight-point statement, a momentous document in itself, appeared to assure the United States a place at any future peace conference and, consequently, a full share in shaping the postwar world.

It was the first statement of peace aims from the British government and the most authoritative yet made for the United States.

The eight points, in brief, commit the two sister nations to the following peace treaty principles:

1. No territorial aggrandizement.

2. No territorial changes not approved by "the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned." This may mean revival of the plebiscites used after the first World War.

3. Respect for the right of all peoples to choose their own form of government and restoration of national sovereignty to conquered peoples.

4. Equal access by all nations to the trade and raw materials of the world. This was interpreted as a bid for favor in Japan, where some business elements do not yet fully support a policy of conquest by force. It might involve relinquishment of some of its special rights by the British Empire.

5. Full economic collaboration among all nations to achieve fair labor standards, economic advancement and social security for all.

6. Guarantees that, "after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny," nations may live in safety free from fear and want.

7. Freedom for all men to "traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance."

8. Disarmament of the Axis nations, accompanied by measures to "lighten the crushing burden of armaments for peace-loving peoples." Thus, pending establishment of some wider system to police the world, Germany would be disarmed, just as after the last war, while her enemies would maintain enough arms to enforce the peace treaty.

The announcement, which was made jointly in London and Washington by the two governments, of course put an end to the nine-day mystery of the whereabouts of the two statesmen.

But one of its major purposes, it was believed here, was to combat in advance any peace campaign that Adolf Hitler may launch in the near future.

Though Russia is still standing firm on the battlefield, there never has been hope here that the Soviets could win the war with Germany. Officials have long expected Germany eventually to conquer Russia, then turn to the world with an offer of peace, claiming he has no more territorial ambitions.

The dramatic Roosevelt-Churchill meeting and their joint statement of peace aims is considered to be a move in the grand strategy to cripple the Nazi peace blitz before it starts.

What action may follow from the meeting has not been indicated.

Secretary Hull, at his press conference, would only remark that the peace aims reflected principles which had long been accepted by civilized countries before, as he put it, some nations set out on a movement to establish rule based on barbarism and savagery.

In Congress, a majority appeared to be enthusiastic for Administration followers and some noninterventionists praised the peace program, but a minority saw in the joint pronouncement evidence of a British-American "alliance."

Diplomatic representatives of the conquered nations here had nothing but praise for the statement, which held out the promise to them of restored national liberty. Berlin treated the meeting as nothing but a propaganda stunt.

While awaiting further word from the President, officials here said the historic meeting and peace program would have these major effects:

1. Pledged the United States and Britain to a defeat of Hitlerism, thus barring any negotiated peace.

2. Assured the United States a place at the conference table.

3. Foreshadowed even more complete fusion of the American and British war efforts.

4. Set before the world a "campaign platform" of the anti-Axis nations that Hitler may find hard to match.

5. Avoided final alienation of Japan, leaving loopholes through which that country could still leave the Axis.

6. Gave even fuller support, if that were needed, to the Russian cause.

The circumstances of the announcement itself were dramatic.

President Roosevelt embarked on a so-called vacation at New London, Conn., August 3, aboard his yacht, the Potomac.

He wirelessed vaguely worded dispatches to shore each day, but none were received after last Saturday morning.

Manwhile, disappearance from public view of Churchill, Hopkins and other high officials, stimulated speculation that Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt would hold a meeting.

These rumors were never denied and were confirmed only yesterday morning, but circumstantial evidence continued to pile up indicating that a meeting was taking place somewhere offshore.

The "secret," which by that time was not so secret, was officially revealed yesterday at 9 a. m. when Maj. Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal, read the Roosevelt-Churchill statement over the radio to the world. The White House simultaneously released the text here, with elaborate precautions to prevent premature publication.

Welles and Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, had foreshadowed the peace terms to some extent in recent speeches.

Welles had declared for a new international organization, along lines laid down for the League of Nations by Woodrow Wilson. Berle last week said that this country was ready to feed the world after the war, and echoed Welles' indorsement of an organization to preserve the peace. Both approved economic equality.

The Roosevelt-Churchill declaration had much in common with the 14 points of peace enunciated before Congress, January 8, 1918, by Wilson.

Wilson's 14 points and the Roosevelt-Churchill document both call for a just peace, restoration of territories to conquered nations, economic equality for all countries, freedom of the seas, a permanent system of general security, and disarmament.

The declaration revealed yesterday by the two leaders of the Western world appeared to follow, in many of its essentials, the philosophy behind the Versailles Treaty, as it was originally conceived by Wilson.

Many observers believed yesterday that President Roosevelt's hope is to make Wilson's dream of a better world come true.

The deep-water conference was believed to have covered the wide range of problems confronting the two nations, including:

than an hour they talked alone, with their ship rocking gently on the Atlantic swell.

"Afterwards Mr. Churchill looked almost boyish as he went into the conference cabin. His aides followed with a great quantity of documents, including many maps.

"Mr. Churchill was well wrapped up, although the weather was not very cold. The President wore a light striped summer suit. Most of the time the two men were together the President had on a broad-brimmed, flopping fisherman's hat.

"Mr. Churchill, of course, was wearing that peaked cap of his which everyone knows.

with bombs, blackmail or bribery of suitable party groups."

It said the determination to achieve "final destruction of the Nazi tyranny" was "grotesque."

Earlier in the day, German spokesman had characterized the Roosevelt-Churchill expression of war aims as a "propaganda bluff" executed at an unpropitious time, since "every hour brings new reports of impressive successes for German arms in the Ukraine."

The first news of the Roosevelt-Churchill move was D. N. B.'s single sentence dispatch under a New York date line:

"The White House announced officially that Roosevelt and Churchill have met secretly on the high sea and agreed on a 'common declaration of war aims.'"

D. N. B. added that the declaration had eight points—but did not list them. It explained, however, that the high spot was "disarmament of the Axis powers" and another objective, after "final destruction of Nazi tyranny," was establishment of a permanent system of general security.

It mentioned the economic cooperation point, but gave no details.

Insufficient, Say French

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Aug. 14 (AP).—A highly placed Vichy French source declared today that the Roosevelt-Churchill war aims statement was "insufficient to assure peace and justice."

This authoritative statement said: "The declaration (by Roosevelt and Churchill) is only a recast in briefer form of the 14 points of President Wilson and simply refurbishes a doctrine which appeared to have some worth 25 years ago. But experience has shown this doctrine is not sufficient to assure peace and justice."

Fascist circles in Rome said that the eight-point declaration would not alter the war course of Germany, Japan or Italy and that Fascists had suspected before announcement that the President and prime minister had agreed on a war plan.

Anticipating the Washington-London announcement, the authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, said that the Americans and British were "hatching new plots in the form of oratorical manifestations and strategems toward this or that part of the globe in the vain hope of halting or deviating the fatal course of the war. . . .

"Whatever is said and done," Gayda wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia, "the war of the Axis, like that of Japan, will continue straight ahead on its course."

cific and further concessions to the Nazis by Vichy France.

These observers—flushed with that spirit which moved men in London to make the frequent toast on this joyous night, "here's to the two of us; let 'em come"—saw it as the avowal of a mighty common front between republic and empire.

They drew three cardinal conclusions, based on their belief that the greatest results of the conference were not revealed and meant this:

1. That there had been a shaping by military, naval and air staffs of a definite strategic policy against Japan, an understanding on positive action should Vichy allow the Nazis to occupy Dakar and Casablanca in Africa and a world-embracing strategy covering the military and air contingencies raised by the present Nazi position in Russia.

2. That the United States would give unstinted aid to Russia and all other powers fighting with the Allies and that Britain would waive priorities on certain classes of material to speed them to Russia.

3. That the United States and Britain would assume the police power of the world at the war's end, although all nations—including Germany—would be allowed to determine their own form of government.

It was seen as wholly probable by British sources that Japan was up for much discussion. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, it was believed, had determined the precise moment and circumstances under which their governments would cease passive resistance and take action against the Japanese—perhaps from British and American bases whose mutual use had been agreed upon.

May Expect Russian Aid

Moreover, it was declared, they might well have agreed to ask Russia to open a northern front with a Siberian force of a million men if war should break in the South Pacific.

Japanese sources themselves said that these were possibilities, although "not necessarily probabilities—" and conceded that Japanese maneuvers for expansion in southern Asia had slowed down even while the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting was no more than a persistent world-wide rumor.

A few hours after the declaration was announced the board of trade published an order effective tomorrow forbidding all exports to Japan except under license, and revoking all outstanding licenses. Korea, Manchukuo, Formosa and the Kwantung leased territory also were affected. The order was explained authoritatively as an implementation of the recent British order freezing Japanese assets.

As to Russia's present struggle for life itself, it would not be surprising if it developed that the President and Prime Minister already had sent their personal assurances to Joseph Stalin that Britain and the United States would give to the Russians every industrial aid in supplying the Soviet armies, air force and navy.

Harry L. Hopkins, the United States lease-lend administrator, was present at the fateful Atlantic rendezvous, available to give the fullest information as to Russian needs not only as of the moment but in the event a Siberian front is to open, and during the day it was reliably reported that he was now back in Washington or on the way.

Prepare for Action

Present, too, at that meeting were high officers of the British and American fighting services and that, in the view of a British informant, suggested preparation for active cooperation, if not staff talks, should the United States actively enter the war.

That French North Africa and Dakar in French West Africa were more than mentioned was accepted here in some quarters, for it was stated that Churchill, long concerned over possible German moves in those directions, would have been likely to emphasize his anxiety.

The eight points were generally seen as similar in many ways to Woodrow Wilson's celebrated 14 of the last great war.

But as to Point 8—that for disarmament — British authorities stressed that it was harder and more "real" than the Wilsonian approach.

"The gangsters are going to be disarmed—that's the golden rule of the show," they elaborated.

"We are not going to be the fools we were last time and scrap our weapons when the war is over."

Members of the British Parliament likewise showed especial favor for this point, for they said it meant the abandonment of the old theory of general disarmament in favor of selective disarmament of those deemed to be menaces to the world —"a step toward realism lacking in Wilson's plan."

Roosevelt, Churchill Careers Have Many Points in Common

By the United Press

The characteristics and public careers of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill have many similarities.

Both were born aristocrats. The lives of both, in the best aristocratic tradition, have been given to public service. Both made brilliant starts in political life while young, suffered reverses which would have obliterated lesser figures and then "came back" to become their respective nations' most forceful leaders of modern times. Highlights of their careers and characteristics:

ROOSEVELT

Born January 30, 1882, to wealth and social position, at the family estate at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Educated at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School, took high honors.

Married in 1905, at age 23, and has four sons and one daughter. Is a grandfather and proud family man.

Has been in public life for 31 years, since election to New York State Senate in 1910.

Was Assistant Secretary of U. S. Navy 1913-20, inspected U. S. naval forces in European waters in 1918, directed demobilization 1919. Strong believer in naval power and is enthusiastic sailor.

Politically, Roosevelt probably is simultaneously the most hated and best loved of American Presidents.

A man of action, Roosevelt delights in power and its spectacular use, is a tireless worker.

Roosevelt is a chain-smoker, with a liking for long holders.

Roosevelt loves to tell stories, which he does well. He has great personal charm.

The President's chief hobbies are stamp collecting and sea fishing.

Roosevelt is a forceful writer with good style, has published six books.

CHURCHILL

Born November 30, 1874, to Lord Randolph Churchill and the former Jennie Jerome, New York beauty.

Educated at Harrow, famous public school, and Sandhurst, the British West Point.

Married in 1908, at age 34, and has one son and three daughters. Is a grandfather and proud family man.

Member of Parliament since 1900, with exception of 1922-24, and member of six cabinets.

Was first lord of the admiralty 1911-15, when war of 1914-18 broke out and again in 1939-40, during first part of this war. Is strong believer in naval power and is enthusiastic sailor.

Churchill is well named the "Stormy Petrel" of British politics, and his career has been one of ups and downs.

Churchill is more American than British in his love for direct action, works 18 hours a day.

Churchill smokes long cigars constantly.

Churchill is a famed raconteur; all his associates give him loyalty amounting to devotion.

The Prime Minister's hobbies are painting and laying bricks.

Churchill is a masterful writer, has published 16 books and many magazine articles.

Churchill, in Parliament, is one of Britain's foremost orators, but his voice is too high-pitched to be pleasant over the air.

to Russia, and we shall certainly give them a share in the future, as now."

On the question of food for Britain, Lord Beaverbrook said that the British workers would particularly like bacon, beef and cheese. He praised the civilian workers, told how they were toiling even on Sundays, and observed with a chuckle:

"If you put a cock into the pit, you have to give him plenty of oats."

In telling of the need of cheese, as well as bacon and beef, he said that the agricultural workers lived on cheese—that "their digestive system is based on cheese."

"You have been very generous," he said at the outset, in talking about war supplies under the Lend-Lease Act, "but we need more. You won't mind, I am sure, if I tell you that we are engaged in a terrible conflict with an enemy that is confident, well-organized, and who has been preparing to fight for years.

"If you expect us to do as well, send us as much as you can and as swiftly as possible under the generous terms of lend-lease.

"We have plenty of tank divisions. We've got tank brigades. But we haven't got enough tanks. We have produced a great many, but we need more very badly.

"We want bombers, and we've had some very fine bomber aircraft from the United States. I think I am justified in saying that the best bombers come from the United States. They have given wonderful results."

Asked about reports that Britain hadn't been able to use some American war planes, Beaverbrook said that it was not likely that any such talk would come out of Germany.

The No. 2 man of Britain said that the empire's pilot-training program was going along well, and had offset a pilot shortage that existed at the outset.

"The youth of the empire," he said, "is inexhaustible."

Lord Beaverbrook apparently does not agree with those who think that it will be possible to bomb Germany into surrender from the air. He said that, of course, air fighting was an extremely important factor. But as for bombing being enough to win—

"It didn't beat us," he said.

Lord Beaverbrook, who has taken a suite at the Mayflower, said he wants to see William S. Knudsen, OPM chief, and other production officials "very, very much." He was asked if he had seen Lend-Lease Administrator Harry Hopkins "recently."

"Oh, I've seen him many times," he said, "but it depends on what you mean by 'recently'."

day avoided a conference on the measure and another precarious vote in the lower chamber.

Although Senate isolations had conceded they had no chance to block final action on the bill, they insisted on a record vote. The roll call showed 31 Democrats and 6 Republicans supporting the measure, with 9 Democrats, 9 Republicans and 1 Progressive (La Follette, of Wisconsin) opposed.

The bill provides for an 18-month extension, or total service of 30 months, for selectees, National Guardsmen and reserves. One-year enlisted men could be kept in the Army for 30 months, while soldiers who enlisted for three years could be held four and a half years.

The legislation, its sponsors pointed out yesterday, does not necessarily mean that all men will be held in the Army an additional 18 months. At the same time, it gives no guarantee that they will be released after the extra 18 months. The bill specifies that a further extension of service can be authorized if Congress declares it is "in the interests of national defense."

For every month served in excess of one year, all noncommissioned officers and men will receive $10 in addition to their regular pay.

The bill removes the present limitation of 900,000 on the number of selectees who may be kept in the Army at one time.

It declares that "the national interest is imperiled" but does not contain the declaration of a national emergency originally requested by the War Department. Congress also departed from the War Department recommendations in refusing to lift the present ban against sending selectees outside the Western Hemisphere and in substituting the 18-month period for an indefinite extension of service.

Two Towns Abandoned, Reds Fighting Fiercely

Third Nazi Offensive Gathering Force After 2-Day Lull

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), Aug. 15.—Germany's third big offensive of the war, resumed with "fierce fighting" along a 1100-mile front after a two-day lull, has driven the Red army from two towns along the Bug River deep in the Ukraine, the Russian high command acknowledged today.

The description of the savage fighting extending from the White Sea down to the Black Sea followed by only a few hours an official statement that "the Germans have been halted everywhere."

The Soviet official spokesman admitted at that time that in some sectors of the Ukraine Marshal Semyon Budenny's forces were making strategic withdrawals but he branded as mere "German wishful thinking" Nazi claims that the great port of Odessa had been encircled.

At the same time it was announced that the German army's "myth of invincibility has been shattered forever" with the destruction and route of more than 30 Nazi divisions whose tens of thousands of dead are strewn along the highways to Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev.

German bombers, for the second successive night, failed to appear over Moscow.

Today's high command communique describing Thursday's fighting said that on the Ukrainian front the Red army had "evacuated" the Bug River town of Pervomaisk 110 miles north of Odessa and 140 miles southeast of Kiev, as well as the town of Kirovograd in the same vicinity.

This meant that the reinforced Germans, swinging south around Kiev and down the Bug Valley toward the Black Sea, had pushed 80 miles further on from Uman which was the most advanced point of fighting there reported in any previous Russian communique.

At Pervomaisk the Germans were along the direct Bug Valley route to the important grain port and naval base of Nikolaev.

"In the course of Thursday, our troops fought the enemy fiercely along the entire front from the White Sea to the Black Sea," the high command said, indicating synchronized heavy German drives against Leningrad, Moscow and Odessa.

No details were provided, however, of the course of the Germans' attempted encirclement of Leningrad which was admitted 24 hours ago to have made a 40-mile advance to the vicinity of Staraya Russa on the southern shore of Lake Ilmen, 140 miles south of Leningrad.

Nor was any description given of the Germans' effort to push upon Moscow from Smolensk, which the Russian high command has admitted abandoning "a few days ago."

Describing continued heavy Russian aerial attacks on German troop columns, motorized units and rear-line airdromes, the communique reported the destruction of 74 German planes on Wednesday against the loss of 27 Russian planes.

A Russian warship in the Baltic was said to have sunk a German submarine while a Soviet submarine sank a 15,000-ton German tanker.

The Soviet official press yesterday carried exultant accounts of the destruction or decimation of more than 30 Nazi divisions and officials said that this figure represented only a part of the Nazi losses in the 7-week-old war.

Reporting that Germany's third great offensive of the 54-day-old war has been crushed in frightful slaughter, the officials claimed the "total annihilation" of at least 10 German divisions and said that 21 other divisions had lost more than half their men.

Against this latest destruction or rout of German forces totaling close to 500,000 men, the Russians claimed a loss of 600,000 troops—dead, wounded and prisoners—in the first six weeks of the fighting.

trapped by the Finns attempting to escape in transport vessels.

[Military observers at Helsinki forecast disaster for the Ladoga withdrawal, pointing to the Finnish air force, the Finns' fast, armed motorboats and batteries along a 100-mile stretch of shore.]

The imminent Black Sea disaster, the Germans said, would be more serious than the British "Dunkerques" because the Russians are not as good sailors as the Britons and their fleet is not as powerful.

The Germans said that the Ukraine defense system was completely breaking down and that, instead of escape, a large part of the Russian army faced annihilation.

Offensive May Slow Down

The most vital thrust, in the German view, was the breakthrough to the Black Sea, near the mouth of the Bug River, before the troops at Odessa could escape.

On other fronts, the Germans said, operations were going as to plan.

One element, however, may slow the offensive—the Ukraine's weather which, it was said, again had turned to rain.

R.A.F. Strikes At Boulogne In Night Raid

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Aug. 15.—British bombers struck at northern France in the darkness today in continuation of attacks on Boulogne and the continental coast during daylight yesterday.

[Berlin reported an air alarm early today when British bombers sought to attack the city.]

Residents of a southeast coast town heard the British planes cross the channel in a steady procession starting justing just before midnight. A few minutes later German antiaircraft batteries flashed along the French coast and the distant rumble of bomb explosions was heard.

During the daylight hours a large force of British Blenheim bombers attacked the docks at Boulogne. They were protected by a cloud of Spitfires and Hurricanes, which engaged enemy fighters. When the last plane had returned to its base the air ministry announced that 14 German aircraft had been destroyed and five British were missing.

The raiding squadrons flew over the coast of Kent at a high altitude, only their thin white vapor trails being visible from the ground. Observers estimated that British fighters, serving in relays as the bombers did their job, were milling around the French coast for an hour in mid-afternoon.

Pilots reported that their bombs landed on their targets at Boulogne.

The story of what happened to most of the German planes shot down yesterday finally was given out by the air ministry. It was the Poles again. Three squadrons of them, flying as one wing, met enemy patrols into which they tore eager for battle. The fight lasted about 13 minutes, and the score stood 13 Messerschmidts destroyed, 3 Polish fliers lost.

The comment of one of the squadron leaders was, "We thoroughly enjoyed the business and we're waiting for some more of it."

Axis Planes Bomb British Destroyers

Rome, Aug. 14 (AP).—Axis warplanes successfully bombed two British destroyers off the north African coast and a Fascist submarine sank an 8500-ton steamer in the Atlantic, the Italian high command reported today.

The same submarine torpedoed another merchant vessel in the Atlantic, a communique said, but it did not claim the ship was destroyed.

Italian warplanes also were reported to have bombed the oft-raided British Mediterranean island base of Malta again during the night.

Free French Assured of Dominance in Syria

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 14.—France, as represented by the Free French, was guaranteed the "predominant position in Syria and Lebanon over any other European power," including, of course, England, in a letter written by Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, representing the British government in the Middle East, to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader, which was made public here today.

Capt. Lyttleton in the letter, dated August 7, reiterated that both Free France and Great Britain are pledged to the independence of Syria and Lebanon and assured Gen. de Gaulle that Britain had no interest in Syria and Lebanon except to win the war.

De Gaulle Gratified

Gen. de Gaulle, in a reply also made public here, expresses gratification at the British admission of France's "preeminent, privileged position" in Syria and Lebanon when those states should have attained independence.

Considerable friction with the Vichy French has arisen in connection with the change-over in Syria and Lebanon, and vigorous efforts are being made to remove the causes.

Besides the arrest of Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz and 34 other Vichy officers on charges of spiriting away British prisoners to France, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson has charged three breaches of the armistice by the Vichy French.

It was made clear here today that the arrest of Gen. Dentz and the other Vichy officers was based on the fact the Vichy French broke faith by sending away British prisoners at the very time the armistice terms were being initialed.

Alleged Violations Given

The three alleged violations of the armistice terms follow:

1. Gen. Dentz denounced as deserters those of his troops who joined the Free French.

2. The families and baggage of many troops who had no opportunities to join the Free French had already been sent to embarkation ports.

3. The Vichy authorities in Syria sold a large quantity of military material to civilians after signing the convention.

These breaches, it was asserted, have left the Allies free to take such action as is necessary to insure that Vichy troops have the opportunity to make a free choice whether to join the Free French, as provided in the armistice.

Authorities here assert that Vichy troops have been coming over to the Free French in increasing numbers the last few days. On a single day 80 officers came over. In numerous instances interference by the Vichy authorities was alleged. Fifty Vichy soldiers at Tripoli endeavoring to join the Free French were arrested by gendarmes. The authorities, however, arrested the gendarmes and liberated the troops.

Senate Backs $1,347,000,000 Army Fund Cut

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate approved yesterday without a dissenting voice a $1,347,000,000 slash in Army ordnance appropriations, then passed the diminished $6,838,436,000 supplemental defense bill.

A War Department fight to restore the big item for reserve supplies of late model tanks, antitank guns, antiaircraft weapons and artillery supplies will be made in conference this morning by House managers of the bill.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, Senate manager of the bill, told the Senate the sum was in excess of requirements for a three-million-man Army and that there was no present need for the money. That was the report of the Appropriations Committee and the Senate did not demur.

War Department officials however, are expected to place in the hands of House conferees today a breakdown of the outlay showing much of the "excess" mechanized equipment would be absorbed by the Army as soon as produced, and all of it is vital if war comes.

Besides eliminating the "special ordnance" outlay, the Senate adopted committee recommendations for a limitation on contracting authority of Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, to obligate funds in excess of bill specifications.

Chairman Carter Glass, of the Appropriations Committee, ardent advocate of a strong National defense and a vigorous foreign policy, offered no objection to the reserve ordnance cut either in committee or on the floor.

Before the Senate met, Senate Majority Leader Barkley told reporters he would not fight the slash. He said he had received no request from the War Department and a unanimous committee report "carries a lot of weight."

As passed by the Senate, the bill would authorize the President to spend four million dollars in "unvouchered" funds, for confidential purposes not stated, out of emergency funds previously granted him.

A letter from Budget Director Smith to Chairman Adams explained only that the four million dollars would be allotted by the President "for those confidential purposes in connection with national security and defense, where the disclosure of the purpose would be contrary to our national interests."

The $1,347,000,000 ordnance slash, only partly offset by $122,142,020 in other increases, brought a net Senate reduction of $1,224,802,000 in the $8,063,238,000 measure passed by the House.

To the Army would go $5,513,819,000, much of this for ammunition. The Navy was allotted $1,632,168,000. The Maritime Commission received $698,650,000 plus a billion-dollar authorization for the construction of 541 new merchant vessels. Other defense agencies received smaller sums.

Truman Charges Army Wasted 'Hundreds of Millions' on Camps

"Several hundred million dollars" have been wasted in the Army camp construction program, Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the special defense investigation committee, charged yesterday.

Truman told the Senate he was "utterly astounded" at the evidence of negligence and inefficiency on the part of the War Department uncovered by his committee in its investigation of cantonment construction. The committee's 20,000-word report was made public shortly before its chairman spoke.

"If our plans for military campaigns are no more extensive and no better than those for construction," Truman declared, "we are indeed in a deplorable situation."

The committee report, issued after months of hearings, is based on a study of construction costs at nine Army posts, including Fort Meade, Md. The nine represent about one-sixth of the total cost of the camp construction program.

The committee states that it "does not wish to detract in any way" from the Army's accomplishment in providing housing, training and recreation facilities for more than 1,200,000 men in the space of a few months.

In page after page of sharply worded comment, however, the committee assails the War Department for lack of "foresight" and "intelligent planning," which, it contends, could have cut materially the time and cost of construction.

At one point, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, asked:

"Then it all boils down that the chief bottleneck which the armaments program confronts is lack of adequate organization and coordination?"

"That is exactly what our investigation has proved," replied Senator Truman.

"Who is responsible for the situation?" Senator Vandenberg pursued.

"Well, there is only one place where the responsibility can be put," said Senator Truman.

"Where is that—the White House?" asked Senator Vandenberg.

"Yes, sir," the Missourian replied.

The War Department's original estimates for the cost of 229 troop housing projects of various types came to $515,755,478, the report points out. When nearly all the projects had been completed last May 31, the bill was estimated at $828,424,102.

The bulk of this increase, according to the committee, can be attributed to failure of the War Department to prepare adequate plans for housing a greatly expanded Army, "bureaucratic red tape," use of cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts, hasty selection of camp sites, heavy labor costs due to increased wages and overtime payment, and mounting costs of building materials.

Truman told the Senate the lessons of the World War camp building program might have proved of great value in the present emergency, but that his investigation disclosed that all copies of a study of 1917-18 camp construction "had been lost by the War Department."

Undersecretary of War Patterson, in a reply to the Truman report, said yesterday that "undoubtedly, in the pressing task suddenly thrust upon the War Department last September of quickly providing housing for 1,200,000 soldiers, mistakes have been made."

Patterson asserted that "the American Army is now the best housed Army in the world."

Truman was particularly critical of the cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts, used at Meade and the other eight camps discussed in the report.

In the nine camps under study, the committee states, the cost per man came to $702.41, against an original estimate of $320. World War camp construction costs were $216 per man, it points out, and at the time were considered "excessive."

"The War Department's estimates did not include an allowance to pay for the namby-pamby attitude now assumed toward the men who were called for the purpose of creating an army," the report states. "No allowances were made for recreational facilities, guest houses for mama and papa and visiting sweeties, or for high-priced and high-powered sewage disposal plants."

Sidelights of the War

Rioting Breaks Out in Paris; Blamed on Shortage of Food

Vichy, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Rioting involving Communists and Jews broke out in German-held Paris yesterday evening during which shots were fired and several persons were wounded, it was revealed in press dispatches to Vichy today.

Rising discontent over the shortage of food was blamed in part for the disorders.

[Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, in his radio speech Tuesday, revealed that unrest is spreading in both unoccupied and Nazi-held France and that the Communists, although legally suppressed, are rising up in opposition to French "collaboration" with Adolf Hitler.]

The newspaper Aujourdhui, insisting that the demonstrators were "all foreign Jewish Communists," said that the rioting began at St. Lazarre Railroad Station at 7 p. m. Wednesday and that police intervened quickly, arresting 16 alleged Communists.

Bader Reported Alive

London, Aug. 14 (A.P.).—An authoritative source said today information had been received that Wing Commander Douglas R. Bader, legless R. A. F. pilot reported missing two days ago, is alive and a German prisoner.

Efforts are being made, the source said, to confirm the information.

Bader, 30, was credited with shooting down 15 German planes and was one of two R. A. F. pilots holding both the Distinguished Service Order with bar and the Dsitinguished Flying Cross with bar.

Turks Expect Iran Move

Istanbul, Aug. 13 (Delayed) (A.P.).—The official Ankara radio said today that Turkey welcomed assurances by Britain and Russia that they had no designs on the Dardanelles and that they would aid Turkey if she were attacked by a European power.

Political circles in Ankara, meanwhile, expressed belief Britain and Russia would move soon to occupy Iran (Persia). In event of such a move, Turkey would maintain the same hands-off policy she pursued in connection with developments in the Balkans.

Vichy, Aug. 14.—Such comment as appears in the press of the unoccupied zone today on Marshal Henri Philippe Petain's broadcast follows closely the marshal's words and is devoted to the internal aspects of his announcements. The comment is well summarized by the newspaper Progress de L'Allier, which observes that the cabinet as now reorganized may be expected to act as a committee of public safety.

There is no reference either to the marshal's appeal to the United States or to the future relations with Germany.

Vichy, Aug. 14.—Admiral Jean Darlan made his debut as minister of national defense today with an order of the day, broadcast by the Lyons radio station to the three fighting services.

"Defeat must not lead to despair, but to meditation on the faults and errors of the past in order to avoid their repetition," Darlan said. "This meditation will surely incite you to line up with the best artisans of the national recovery in discipline, confidence and optimism."

Concentration Camp Mutiny: 70 Executed

Zagreb, Aug. 14 (A.P.).—Seventy-five persons were shot to death in Croatia today, 70 of them because of a mutiny in a concentration camp at Travnik in Bosnia.

Two Communists were executed at Sarajevo for distributing communistic leaflets and three others in Essegg for spreading Communist propaganda.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 14.—Secretary Morgenthau's current proposals for broadening the income tax base are directly in line with public sentiment throughout the country. However, the Nation's voters would favor an even stiffer tax on the lower income groups than any recommended in Washington, either by the Treasury or by Congress.

The sums which the public considers "fair" are not only more drastic than the Treasury's, but also more drastic than the levies which a cross-section of people listed in "Who's Who in America"—catalog of the Nation's leaders in all fields—would impose on the lower income brackets.

The Institute conducted its survey among "Who's Who" in order to determine what that group of leading educators, professional men, and business executives would consider a fair income tax for the lower economic brackets. The respondents were asked whether they thought all families, not on relief, should pay an income tax, and if so, how much should be levied on the lowest groups.

The vote is:

Vote of Who's Who
Yes	53%
No	37
No Opinion	10

Next the cross-section of "Who's Who" was asked what tax they thought should be levied on incomes ranging between $1,000 and $2,000.

The results, as compared with the general public's ideas reported by the Institute earlier this week, are as follows:

Family of 4 Earning:	What Who's Who Think Tax Should Be	What Public Thinks Tax Should Be	Actual Tax Proposed in House Bill
1,500	13	17	0
2,000	26	55	0
2,500	140	11	0
5,000	356	262	0
10,000	1,123	988	0
50,000	10,000	19,527	0
100,000	24,000	52,738	0

The public's desire to place an income tax on the masses who are now exempt dates back many months.

In May, for example, the Institute conducted a survey on the question whether every family, not on relief, should be required to pay some income tax, even if the amount were as little as $10 for the poorest families. The vote was 58 per cent in the affirmative.

As revealed in the Institute report early this week, the public's chief ideas are (1) to make families now exempt pay at least something, (2) to levy a higher tax than at present on incomes between $3,000 and $10,000, and (3) to lower the tax on families earning over $10,000.

A comparison of the public's views, and the actual rates set in the tax bill passed by the House of Representatives, follows:

Family of 4 Earning:	Income Tax If Public Wrote Bill	Rates in Tax Bill Passed by House
$ 1,000	$ 6	0
2,000	55	0
2,500	140	11
5,000	356	262
10,000	1,123	988
50,000	10,000	19,527
100,000	24,000	52,738

Dies Branded 'Irresponsible' By Henderson

By the Associated Press

Price Administrator Leon Henderson expressed his opinion to a House committee yesterday that Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, was "not a responsible member of Congress."

Appearing before the House Banking Committee on price control legislation, Henderson said he would accept reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Treasury relative to the hiring or firing of employes of the Office of Price Control and Civilian Supply.

Representative Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, asked whether Henderson would accept a report of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, headed by Dies, and give it equal weight.

"Absolutely not," shouted Henderson, jumping to his feet. "We undertake to have the very best reviews made of our employes. I will not fire any one because Martin Dies or any one else highly or lowly placed casts reflections upon him. I think too much of the dignity of the individual to do that."

Crawford first asked Henderson whether the FBI had ever investigated OPACS staff members. The administrator said the FBI had investigated all of them as a routine matter, because they were engaged in defense work.

The Michigan Representative then referred to statements made recently on the House floor by Dies that Tom Tippett, a member of Henderson's staff, was connected with Communist front organizations.

This Henderson denied.

"He (Tippett) would not be on my staff if he were and if I knew it," the administrator added. "The Dies Committee, as I recall it, listed him as a member of organizations which Dies said were fronts—I don't know what tenuous phraseology he uses."

Asked what he would do if a Dies Committee report showed any OPACS employes had participated in Communist activities, Henderson replied that the FBI and the Treasury had access to the Dies reports.

"I'd like to know what respect you have for the report of Congressional committees," Crawford pursued.

"I have the greatest respect for all of them with the possible exception of the Dies committee," said the price administrator. "A member who does the things that Dies does is not a responsible member of Congress."

Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, interrupted at that point to say that Dies had said Henderson had a record of sponsorship in four Communist-controlled organizations.

"At the time Dies said that," Henderson commented, "I was a member of the American Legion, the Free and Accepted Masons, Delta Ipsilon Fraternity and the Democratic Party—oh, yes, and the National Press Club and the board of trade of Millville, N. J."

Morgenthau Favors Wage Savings Plan

By Nicholas P. Gregory

Copyright by New York Times

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, revealed at his press conference yesterday that the Treasury will recommend to Congress higher social security taxes and an extension of the social security program, not only as an anti-inflation move, but also to cushion the unemployment that may result when the present war boom is over.

The Secretary said the Treasury has been studying for sometime the economic effects of the demobilization of millions of workers in the post-defense period.

He is particularly impressed with the "separation wage" idea advanced by Douglas Brown, which, generally speaking, calls for systematic savings to be turned over to the employe during periods of unemployment.

The program now under study and favored by Jacob Viner, consultant to Morgenthau, provides:

(1) Blanketing more people under the Social Security program by bringing in agricultural workers and domestic help.

(2) Increase in Social Security taxes. At present the employer and employe each contribute 1 per cent.

(3) The "separation wage," which would differ somewhat from the present unemployment compensation schemes.

Morgenthau said he continued to be opposed to enforced savings as an anti-inflation mechanism and as a postwar "nest egg."

The Secretary emphasized that higher social security taxes should be supplemented by the "separation wage" scheme "so that whenever this is over there will be accumulated for the workers several months' pay to be a cushion for them, a security."

The National Resources Board estimates that by 1944 about 23 million workers will be employed in war industries. In addition, if the armed forces are demobilized in the postdefense period, about 26 million persons must be shifted to peacetime work.

Lord Beaverbrook's Job Is To 'Bring Home the Bacon'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Lord Beaverbrook, a newspaperman himself, had one of the biggest news stories in history yesterday, but he couldn't tell it to the 50 reporters who besieged him at the British Embassy.

He had flown here in a bomber after taking part in the epic Roosevelt-Churchill conference in the North Atlantic. He knew all about the setting of the conference aboard H. M. S. Prince of Wales; he knew about anecdotes that will some day find their way into the history books; he knew the whole dramatic, world-shaking story. But however rampant his news instinct happened to be, he had to forego the telling of that story.

As he explained it, he was there only in his role as British minister of supply. And now he had come to Washington in the same role, hoping that America will "send us as much as you can and as swiftly as possible under the generous terms of lend-lease."

In the two years and three months since the American journey of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth broke the ice, Washington newsmen have attended so many press conferences at the British Embassy that the experience has ceased to be a novelty. But never before had they heard anybody at the British Embassy talk like Beaverbrook.

His words as he crouched at a table on the veranda came out like pistol shots, and they were delivered in Canadian, which means the same thing as American. He said that he was the "biggest buyer on the cuff you have ever seen."

Lord Beaverbrook is a little man with a large head, bushy eyebrows, a corrugated forehead and a large mouth that frequently curves upward in a grin. In Britain he is a cartoonist's delight.

When he was minister of aircraft production and was rolling out the planes that were to help the R. A. F. ward off the Luftwaffe, he granted an American reporter an interview and immediately launched into praise of the British people.

"I'm a foreigner here, you know," he said, "so I can see them as they can't see themselves. They're the greatest race on earth. Nobody else could have pulled themselves together like this."

And yesterday he referred to himself as "a citizen of this continent."

His story is a fantastic one. He was born William Maxwell Aitken, in Maple, Ontario, Canada, on May 25, 1879, son of a Scotch Presbyterian minister. His paternal grandfather was a farm laborer in Scotland, a fact of which Max Aitken always boasted.

The Aitkens were poor and young Max only attended the village school. He washed bottles for a chemist at $1 a week and sold newspapers while still a school boy.

And yet with only a rudimentary education, no money and no prospects, he wrested a fortune in the Montreal financial world by the time he was 25. At the age of 31 he had acquired more than five million dollars and had been elected a member of the British Parliament. He was knighted a year later, and when he was 39, he was made a member of the peerage with the title of Lord Beaverbrook.

In the World War he was minister of information. It was at this time that he bought the London Daily Express, then a small newspaper with little circulation and less influence. He and his "Express amateurs" were the joke of Fleet Street. But soon the joke was on the jokers. The Daily Express began to boom, and by 1936 it had a circulation of more than 2,500,000 copies daily.

In 1924 Lord Beaverbrook acquired the Evening Standard and merged it with the Pall Mall Gazette and Globe. His newspaper properties, valued in 1936 at 20 million dollars, increased his fortune to an estimated 50 million dollars—a sum that must have been considerably dented by the taxes Britain has imposed since the outbreak of the war.

Lord Beaverbrook is very much opposed to smoking. He used to play a lot of tennis, but has now given it up. He has been described as "a movie fiend," and his favorite star is said to be Marlene Dietrich. His friends say that he saw "Destry Rides Again" nine times.

He has two sons and a daughter, and the eldest son, Max, is in the Royal Air Force.

He has come to Washington to try and get more planes, more tanks, more bacon, beef and cheese. In view of his record, there can only be one result: He is going to get more planes, tanks, bacon, beef and cheese.

Diplomats Express Elation Over U. S.-British Aims

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Expressions, couched in elation, were given The Post by seven embassies and legations representing peoples who have been overrun by Nazi armies yesterday following announcement of the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration.

Citizens—the man on the street—applauded the eight points, too. "The objectives are remarkably conceived. I hope a means can be devised for carrying them out," said Floyd Barrus, of Greenbelt, Md. "The accomplishment of the policy would no doubt be the greatest step forward the world has known," said Maurice Weiss, 2305 Champlain Street Northwest. "The inauguration of the policy would be tantamount to the fulfillment of Utopia on earth," asserted J. Willard Babcock, of Mount Rainier, Md., George Washington University student.

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the School of Foreign Affairs, Georgetown University, analyzing the joint declaration, asserted that "all told, the people of the United States can hardly look forward to anything but war, unless an eleventh-hour miracle of nature or Divine grave intervenes."

(Text of Father Walsh's analysis on Page 12.)

nations were, in the main, encouraged vastly by the declaration.

Hugues Le Gallais, Minister from Luxemburg, said it is difficult for the Minister of a small country to express his elation at the text of the joint declaration made by the President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill. . . .

"The oppressed people of an occupied country cannot fail to derive great comfort and joy from this declaration of these two great statesmen of our times and particularly from the words: 'They wish to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them.' On the whole, this declaration will have a most heartening effect on all those who believe in the possibility of nations existing peacefully side by side and who look forward to the day when fear will no longer dominate the hearts of men," said the minister.

The Danish Legation said, "Undoubtedly the statement should cause the greatest encouragement in Denmark. The Danish people have been looking forward to their liberation and to Great Britain and the United States as their only hope."

The Netherlands minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, called the declaration "an exceedingly inspiring" one.

"I am sure it will have an uplifting effect on the population of the Netherlands," Dr. Loudon said.

Ambassador Jan Ciechanowski, of Poland, termed it "an extremely welcome confirmation of the united action of the two great democracies against the attempts at world domination by Hitlerite Germany."

"It will have an enormous moral effect in all those countries which are now invaded by Germany and whose peoples are so valiantly resisting Nazi domination. It will certainly strengthen their resolve in the fight for freedom. I welcome it very strongly for the people of Poland who have never given up the fight for freedom and who will be strengthened by this declaration," he stated.

In absence of the Ambassador, the Belgian Embassy said it was "very pleased and appreciates the point in the statement concerning the independence of the small states."

The Greek Minister, Dimitri P. Diamantopoulos said, "I have no instructions from my government to speak in their behalf about the joint statement of Great Britain and the United States. But I feel confident that the contents will meet with the full approval of the Greek government and the Greek nation as a whole."

The Norwegian Legation said it regarded the declaration as very important and anticipated comment on it from the Norwegian government in London.

The Czecho-Slovakian Minister, Vladimir Hurban, said that "like Wilson's 14 points in the first World War, as President

DIAMANTOPOULOS

Roosevelt's and Prime Minister Churchill's eight points in the present war are the turning point toward the moral victory of decency over barbarism, victory which will be followed as in the first war by material victory over the aggressors."

British Daylight Air Raids

A British Blenheim bomber (left) wings away after swooping low over Knapsack to bomb the industrial town, in northern Germany, near Cologne. Official photo at right shows a direct bomb hit on a coal-handling plant in Fortuna, also in northern Germany. London reported that daylight raids were also carried out yesterday over the docks at Boulogne, German-occupied France. Bombs were seen "bursting on the target," it was authoritatively stated. A fighter escort for the bombers reportedly shot down 13 German fighter planes. Three R. A. F. fighters were missing, it was said. (Photos cabled from London) suggesting a uniform national daylight time program.

It carried through the winter, for instance, daylight time here would mean less electricity burned by late office workers when darkness falls long before supper time.

Plans already are under way to expand the city's power facilities, but the drain would be reduced considerably if private and non-defense agencies closed an hour earlier.

The daylight saving issue once again will be considered by the Washington Board of Trade Monday at a meeting of the executive committee, it was reported last night.

Previously the board indorsed the switch-over "in the interest of national defense," but agreed Washington should do nothing unless neighboring Maryland and Virginia communities followed suit.

Since parts of Virginia adopted daylight time August 10 at the request of Gov. Price, the counties of Arlington and Fairfax and the City of Alexandria have been "out of step" with the State's program, declining to change clocks until the District acts.

This, it was indicated last night, may influence the trade board to take a stronger stand and advocate steps to place Washington on "fast time."

Maryland has yet to act, but Gov. O'Conor has indicated he may yet suggest the move to his Legislature. Maryland was the only Southeastern State not included in the President's recent request to adopt a unified daylight saving plan in order to conserve electric power for defense purposes.

From John Locher, executive of the Washington Building Trades Council and Central Labor Union, came word last night that union workers also would welcome the change to daylight time here.

Although union construction employes now go to work a half-hour ahead of workers in most other cities, Locher said they "undoubtedly would enjoy and welcome" the extra recreational time permitted under daylight saving.

He said his organization has taken no official stand regarding the change in time.

"But I'm sure we would go along—especially if the plan is also adopted by Maryland and Virginia sections bordering the District."

Commissioner Mason said daylight time also would "tie in" with the local gasoline conservation program.

"If people have an extra hour to play golf and tennis," he declared, "they will take advantage of it and not do so much driving around for pleasure and relaxation."

Bishop Hughes Cites Necessity Of Real Faith

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retired prelate of the Washington area, Methodist Church, yesterday told delegates at the Massanetta Springs (Va.) Bible Conference that a "personal completeness" is necessary in reaching a creed of real faith.

Addressing ministers and Laymen at a "Methodist Day" program, he urged that the mind, heart and will be given their proportionate parts in spiritual decisions. "God is our friend," he said, "and we do not base our human friendships on mere logic."

Another speaker, Dr. Frederick W. Norwood, former pastor of City Temple, London, said "it is not enough to preach moral reform as a substitute for the Cross."

"The fact that Christianity is basically true was never clearer than it is now. It is clear that men must live together in peace or perish."

Our attitude toward war should be clear-eyed and Christian, said Dr. T. K. Young, of Memphis, Tenn., in his address.

"War is a costly and senseless outrage and a damnable tragedy, and we ought to understand this before we go into it. War isn't a crusade, it is a monumental crime."

Today will mark the twentieth anniversary of the establishment of the Bible conferences in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley. It opened with four sessions over a month-long period. Today there are 11 conferences over a 10½-week period. It is estimated that 1¼ million people have attended in 20 years.

A special anniversary program is planned for tonight, when a representative of each of the conferences being held at Massanetta will briefly discuss the value of such meetings.

Selects to Get Tests Ahead Of Induction

The War Department has ordered widespread revision of the system of inducting the Nation's Selective Service trainees to put an end to difficulties arising when men sever home connections, only to be turned down by Army medical examiners, it was announced yesterday.

Main feature of the new system, which was employed on an experimental basis in Pennsylvania in May and June, is to put the registrant through the Army physical test well in advance of his scheduled call.

Thus a man who is not up to Army standards would be told of this fact long enough ahead of time to cut out need for quitting his job and breaking the family ties.

The new procedure will vary somewhat from State to State. In some densely populated States examining headquarters will be distributed so that no man need travel more than a day's journey from his home to take the test. In more sparsely peopled areas, "circuit-riding" doctors will conduct the examinations.

Simultaneously Washington Selective Service headquarters yesterday announced the breakdown by local boards of the mid-September requisition for 566 District men for induction into the Army.

Local officials, citing a memorandum from national selection headquarters, stated that men who had been reclassified after being temporarily deferred had the same right of appeal from their 1-A reclassifications as they had before their original deferment.

The communication from national headquarters also said that "any registrant whose period of deferment for an occupational reason is expiring, or his employer, should formally request his local board for an extension well in advance of its expiration.

"This will not only facilitate action in his case but also will help to prevent interference with the national defense program."

Meanwhile, more than 500 registrants took physical examinations at six local hospitals last night as selection officials prepared a reserve of candidates against calls in late September and October.

The 566 men who will be called September 15, 16, 17 and 18 are replacements for men 28 and over who were withdrawn from previous requisitions. The breakdown of these men by boards follows:

Board No. 1, 17; No. 2, 24; No. 3, 17; No. 4, 26; No. 5, 28; No. 6, 25; No. 7, 24; No. 8, 25; No. 9, 30; No. 10, 22; No. 11, 20; No. 12, 10; No. 13, 20; No. 14, 23; No. 15, 30; No. 16, 25; No. 17, 35; No. 18, 15; No. 19, 14; No. 20, 25; No. 21, 16; No. 22, 30; No. 23, 25; No. 24, 30; No. 25, 10.

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Lamond In Silver Spring

Mrs. Otis Franz Lamond, 53, of Olney, Md., died yesterday at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring. She suffered a stroke two weeks ago.

Mrs. Lamond was the wife of Wallace Lamond, a former owner of the terra cotta plant in Takoma Park. The Lamonds lived for 30 years in Takoma Park before moving to Olney about a year ago.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Lamond is survived by a son, William Wallace, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hollidge, of Silver Spring.

Services will be held tomorrow at 3:30 in the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Gain of 2000 Traffic Cases Attributed to Capital's Growth

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Metropolitan Police traffic division, yesterday cited Washington's rapidly climbing population and a more rigid enforcement of traffic regulations as reasons for an increase of more than 2000 Police Court traffic cases reported for the past fiscal year by the Corporation Counsel's office yesterday.

The report, submitted to Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech from his office's Police Court branch, stated that a total of 31,811 traffic violations were booked with the court during the year ending June 30. Fines and forfeitures amounted to $495,206.

The traffic bookings represent a boost of almost 2400 cases over the previous fiscal year, and the fines and forfeitures, an increase of $118,376.

Speed cases and right of way violations both showed sizeable increases, and 45 cases of passing a street car were reported, compared with none last year. Decreases were shown in disorderly conduct and drunkenness offenses.

A 57 per cent drop in nolle prossed cases was also noted in the report. The greater part of the decrease was recorded for January to June, 1941, or roughly the period during which Keech has been in office. He asked upon taking office late in 1940 that cases not be dropped unless absolutely necessary and that a full report be submitted on all cases not prosecuted.

'Wild Geese Calling' Brings Capitol Echo of the Past

Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett Are Costars Of a Reminiscent Drama of the North Woods; Ella Logan and Rimac Band Headline Stage

"WILD GEESE CALLING." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Stewart Edward White, adapted to the screen by Horace McCoy, costarring Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett, with Warren William, Ona Munson, Barton MacLane, Russell Simpson, Iris Adrian, James C. Morton, Paul Sutton, Mary Field, Stanley Andrews, Robert Emmett Keane, Michael Morris, George Watts and Charles Middleton. Directed by John Brahm. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

IF STEWART EDWARD WHITE had not written "Wild Geese Calling," Rex Beach or the late James Oliver Curwood, in due course, probably would have gotten around to the lure of freedom and adventure symbolized by the winged migrants flying the clouds in bomber formation and wangled a comparable tale of rough going in the primitive Northwest in the rugged '90's, when "Klondike" was a magic word. In fact, all three did it more than once and most of their yarns found their way to the screen, back in the days before the cinema found its voice.

The present film at Loew's Capitol harks back at least that far in form and treatment. It is the familiar tale of love, villainy, retribution and virtue's eventual triumph, turned over to a cast of competence and plumped down into the midst of some gorgeous natural scenery that cries out for the Technicolor photography it does not possess. It is a majestically impressive pictorial display now and again, even so.

The characters of Mr. White's fable are as well known as the tempestuous situations in which they find themselves involved. There are the credulous and honest young lumberjack, seeing the ocean for the first time from the Seattle docks; the dancehall gal, with whom he falls in love; the roving renegade, with a prior claim, who happens to be her lover's ideal of a man of the world; a few former victims of this oily gent; the Poo-Bah of the settlement, who holds all the jobs there are and owns everything in sight; a Belle Watling of the north woods and numerous others who get themselves into the usual mess—until the baby is born. That is the radiant event that straightens everybody out and proves again that a few candid words by any one of the crowd would have composed all misunderstandings in the beginning—except that then there would not have been any picture.

A Capable Cast Wasted

The three pivotal figures are played by Henry Fonda, who catches the wild fowls' wanderlust from his high perch as a timber-topper; Joan Bennett, the Sally of the honky-tonks, and Warren William, the insidious protagonist of perfidy. Their talents are several cuts above the material with which they find themselves concerned. Russell Simpson, as all the law and order there is in the Alaskan settlement to which the action moves for its climactic interludes; Barton MacLane, Mr. William's principal victim, and Ona Munson, the Belle Watling transplanted north from "Gone With the Wind's" Deep South, are the most helpful members of the supporting cast. The trouble does not lie with any of these sterling players, but in the terrific triteness of the outmoded play in which they attempt to turn back the calendar.

Miss Logan Steals a Show

The stage revue at the Capitol this week is dominated by that prodigious young singer of Scotch and other ballads, Ella Logan, although nominally headlined by Ciro Rimac and his rattle-de-bang Rhumba Orchestra. Miss Logan varies the ricocheting rhythms of her Scots numbers with such items as Helen Morgan's "My Bill" and other diverse roundelays and, at yesterday's first performance, had to beg off from further encores. Rimac introduces a grist of fiery Latin-American singers and dancers, including Alizira Camargo, a sort of modified Carmen Miranda; Charley Boy, Estrellita Pena and Chiquita Maria. His instrumentalists, as is their wont, practically tear the place apart. Sam Barton opens the proceedings with a ridiculously clever tramp bicycle act, in pantomime, and Eddie Rio and Brothers contribute some plain and fancy dancing, horseplay and slow-motion comedy.

They Want to Wear Insignia!

Palace

It would indeed be news if "Charley's Aunt" had stayed at the Palace for only a week. Imagine Jack Benny, jello-jowled comedy king of radio, playing the most successful farce of the past century for merely a single week on F street. Then, forsoothe, the world would be an unpredictable place.

For while the Benny style is anything but well adapted to this honorable farce, "Charley's Aunt" still has its laughs and chuckles, which is probably what makes "Charley's Aunt" "Charley's Aunt!" Trouble with Benny in this comedy is that his humor is strictly 1940, with the Brandon Thomas vehicle representing, however merrily, another period. The smartypants Benny is not exactly at home in the polite, billowy humor which tickles and titivates, but never employs the kick-in-the-pants style of our hurried era.

Yet, even with this questionable star-casting, it would still be news if "Charley's Aunt" had closed Wednesday evening to make room for a new bill at the Palace. In the supporting roles of Oxford students, residents and the all-important Brazilian widow are James Ellison and Richard Hayden (he the fishy Mr. Carp of Beatrice Lillie's most recent revue); Arleen Whelan and Anne Baxter, the girls; Edmund Gwenn, the pinch-penny oldster and Laird Cregar, the amenable father; Kay Francis, the real "Charley's Aunt."

So, considering that "Charley's Aunt" is continuing for a second week on F street, there's hardly any news at all at the Palace.

Authenticity

A real Air Corps officer, Capt. John H. Fite, collaborated with Hollywood scenarist John Twist in preparing the original story, "Parachute Battalion," produced by RKO Radio.

Columbia

A gentlewoman's reaction to the hardening blows of life and how she turned this bitterness into the quality of mercy forms the compelling, true story of "Blossoms in the Dust." Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon are costarred in this film reopening yesterday at the Columbia.

Mrs. Edna Gladney, of Fort Worth, Tex., is the heroine of this contemporary biography. Her family gave her a life of pleasant ease. Sudden tragedy in the deaths of her foster-sister and her own only child brought her face-to-face with the problems of the foundlings. Gradually the Gladney household was transformed into a veritable orphanage. A long-drawn-out battle with the legislators of the State finally softened the laws applicable to those born out of wedlock.

A richly detailed production tells this gentle story. Technicolor reveals the lovely Greer Garson in a role finely suited to her radiant understanding. Pidgeon's, too, is a thoughtfully conceived portrayal. Henry O'Neill, Felix Bressart, Marsha Hunt, Samuel S. Hinds, Kathleen Howard and Fay Holden are the chief supporting players.

Hayden Is Colonel To Bar-20 Buddies

Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Bill Boyd's side-kick in the famous Hopalong Cassidy pictures, is an Army colonel, although he has never had military training. After location filming of "Wide Open Town," Hayden was guest of John Miles, governor of New Mexico. The governor and his staff were so impressed at the ability of young Hayden in riding and shooting that he was officially extended the honor of a Colonel's appointment on the staff.

HEDDA HOPPER

Dancer a Dutiful Daughter

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 14.

"There was a young lady named Valerie
Who kicked her slipper clear to the gallery.
This rare flash of wit
Made such a hit
That they doubled Miss Valerie's salary."

And if that isn't just like Hollywood, I'll eat it!

You've heard about Zorina the dancer, Zorina the actress, and Zorina who could keep on her ballet slippers with glue without the aid of pink ribbons, but won't because it would break the old tradition. But you haven't heard of Zorina the daughter.

VERA ZORINA

Before she comes to work in the morning, and she's here at 7 a. m., she has taken her mother a hot breakfast to the hospital, because that's the meal her mother enjoys most. How'd you like to have a daughter like that? Frankly, I would.

When Bob Fresnell left to join up with the Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J., Cecilia Callejo gifted him with two stunning English bags having combination locks. Next morning a frantic phone call from Phoenix, Ariz. "Cissie, for heaven's sake, I've lost the combination to those bags and I haven't even a tooth brush. Did you write the numbers down anywhere?" "You goose!" said Cecelia, "just dial your phone number."

The awful truth is out at last. Brian Donlevy's middle name is —WALDO!! Brian had a fan letter from a marine on duty in China, saying he'd discovered his secret in an old film magazine, unearthed in a service club. "Every time I see you, Tough Guy, in a picture and think of that moniker," he writes, "I bust right out laughing."

Ed Buchanan, Columbia's dentist comedian, who made such a hit in "Penny Serenade," has gone up to his farm in Oregon on vacation. Says he has ten patients up there who won't go to a dentist, so he has to get there once a year to look after them. Boy! That's my idea of real service.

The "Hardy" pictures are doing much to revive standards and values we Americans seem to have lost in this hectic age and which we sorely need. The latest, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," sounds a new note of pathos as Andy leaves home for his first try at standing on his own feet. There's a tug at the heart that every mother will feel at seeing him lose his puppy-fatness and start paying to the deeper strains of manhood, and Mickey Rooney does it well. I've always been a sucker for these pictures.

"Sergeant York" has been chosen by the American Red Cross to open the 65 Government-built theaters now nearly completed in 65 service camps throughout the country . . . Hear Pat O'Brien is being discussed for the "Life of Lou Gehrig," to follow up his "Knute Rockne" characterization. Did you know Pat was a star baseball player in college?

John Powers, of the big model agency, has been angling for Boots Mallory to come to New York, but Boots, the old stick-at-home, won't leave hubby Bill Cagney!

Fred Cavens, who is teaching Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., to fence for "The Corsican Brothers," is the same man who taught Doug's father swordsmanship for his many pictures. But Junior will never be the swordsman his father was. Doug, sr., had more bounce.

Film Lovelies Tax Navy's Resources

Six pretty girls have taxed the resources of the United States Navy. They not only created a shortage of writing materials but also were held responsible for embarrassing the Navy with extra laundry work.

The girls were Lorraine Gettman, Georgia Carroll, Claire James, Peggy Diggins, Kay Aldridge and Marguerite Chapman, members of the Navy Blues Sextet.

They signed autographs on every available scrap of paper when they appeared at the training station at San Diego with Warner Brothers' "Navy Blues" company.

Then, when paper gave out, the sailors offered shirts, collars and caps.

Star Rides Her Clothes-Horse

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (INS).—That expose on Hollywood "figgers" in a current fan magazine had every glamour girl in town on her ear—all except Loretta Young, who really has a sense of humor. Loretta told a friend that they padded everything except her pompadour—which is silly, of course. A famous clothes designer herself has said Loretta has one of the three best clothes figures in Hollywood.

LORETTA YOUNG

Evidently Frank Lloyd thinks there's nothing wrong with La Young's "glamour appeal" either, because he's all set to buy a yarn called "Chameleon" providing Loretta accepts the top femme role. It is a sophisticated comedy by Thomas Monroe and Lazlo Gorog about an actress who acquires three husbands in rapid succession and divorces them just as quickly. Then the boys get together and try to analyze how and why they failed as her husbands. Sounds a little like the "Tom, Dick and Harry" idea in reverse. It would be one of the Lloyd productions for Universal release.

One of Hollywood's most gifted and interesting actresses is Elsa Lanchester, in private life Mrs. Charles Laughton. Elsa has an infinite capacity for work and is only happy when she is busy. She has two movies lined up now. The first is Tyrone Power's "Benjamin Blake," in which she plays a woman of easy virtue who befriends Ty and risks her life to save him. A highly dramatic role, she's very much excited about it. She is also in Charlie's new comedy, "Out of Gas." He always wants his wife to be in his pictures when it is possible because he believes Elsa is lucky for him. Even though she has the one date at Twentieth and the other at RKO, she will continue appearing nightly at the Yale Puppeteers in Hollywood—and that, my friends, is a really charming show.

Rita Hayworth was so eager to have Richard Wallace direct her in "Eadie Was a Lady" that Gene Markey, the producer, unable to get her telephone in the high Sierras, closed the deal with Wallace and arranged to have a special messenger sent to her with the news. This should prove as much as anything else just what Columbia thinks about Rita. It is no secret that they feel she is their greatest potential star. Ever since she went glamorous on us in "Blood and Sand" her stock has risen by leaps and bounds. Before that, she had plenty of bouquets for her work in "Strawberry Blonde." Rita must pinch herself to realize that just two years ago she was an "also ran," just another pretty girl in the Hollywood line-up.

A difference of opinion between Zoltan Korda, the director, and Jerome Cowan, the actor, on how the role of Buldeo should be played in "The Jungle Book," Sabu's movie, has resulted in Cowan leaving the cast and Joseph Calleia being substituted. Considerable footage had been shot, and in Technicolor, so that it necessitates a great deal of the Rudyard Kipling story's being refilmed. Interesting that Calleia gets the role, because he was Korda's choice in the beginning. The Korda office was unwilling to discuss the details of what happened and I was unable to reach Mr. Cowan, so it is only fair to say they parted company by mutual agreement.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Martha Scott and Carlton Alsop are preparing the nursery for a little stranger, expected in six months; Lana Turner and Tony Martin have set the day, and it's in September; Gloria Vanderbilt's birthday gift to Edward Ashley today was an alligator wallet; Brenda Frazier and her bridegroom, Shipwreck Kelly, returned from their honeymoon in Honolulu today and planed out immediately for New York. Brenda says she is through with night clubs, and doesn't want to make a movie and expects to settle down.

Gale Page, 'tis whispered, will wed Count Aldo de Solis when his divorce becomes final; Ellen Drew is in the hospital in Reno and will wed Cy Bartlett just as soon as she's better; George Brent, out of hospital, dining at the Miramar with Minna Wallis, his special representative;

Adopted Son Breaks Down And Tells All

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood Aug. 14.—The girl we want to meet is Edna Skelton, one-time usherette at Loew's theater in Kansas City. She made her redhaired husband worth $2,000 of the movies' money every week. If it weren't for her he'd be a bum. That's exactly what he said.

As it is, with Edna writing the gags and managing the business and teaching her husband the rudiments of trigonometry and medieval history, he's one of the funniest comedians in the business, star of the hit, "Whistling in the Dark," and one of the principals of the upcoming musical, "Panama Hattie." Edna did it all. Red insists she did.

Young Skelton, who was born in 1912 in Vincennes, Ind., and got his first theatrical experience at the age of 10, tooting a horn in a medicine show, tried his hand as a minstrel, a showboat comedian, a circus clown and a red-nosed burlesque tramp before he met Edna.

"I was 17 and I was playing in Loew's in Kansas City," he reported today. "Edna Stillwell was head usherette in the balcony. She'd come back stage with our pay checks on Saturday night, and she took an instant dislike to me. So okay. I knew a lot of girls."

Red's next job was that of master of ceremonies at one of those weird athletic events known as a walkathon. Edna was cashier. She finally made a date with him. He took her home on a streetcar. It was such a long ride Red said never again. He knew girls who lived closer.

It Must Have Been Love

"And one night they called in the photographers to take some pictures and they wanted a picture of me kissing a girl," Red continued. "There was Edna and I grabbed her and kissed her and it made me dizzy. This was it. This was love. I guess we both were dizzy. We got married. Edna paid for the license. I borrowed $10 from her and bought her a new hat. And we went to St. Louis, where I had a deal to do another walkathon show at $75 a week. Only they wanted to cut my salary.

"Edna made me sore by going to the boss and playing manager for me. I told her I'd handle my own affairs. Only she shut me up with the news that I'd get $100 a week. She also talked the boss into doing my dry cleaning. I said I'd have to have free food, too. I was still mad. The manager said I could have my meals on the cuff. That's when Edna floored me first. But that was only the beginning. She gradually worked me up to $500 a week in the walkathon business."

Then Red went into vaudeville. He had a 25-week run in Montreal and he began to run out of material. Edna wrote him some. It didn't seem funny to that experienced comedian, Red Skelton.

"But the customers laughed," he said. "Edna knew what she was doing. She kept on writing my material."

A "Grand" Not Enough

His wages went up to $1,000 a week. That wasn't enough for Edna. Her husband was a prosperous man, but he made a lot of bad grammatical errors. He'd never had a chance to pass the seventh grade. So she bought some books and started teaching him English and spelling and arithmetic. Then she hired a tutor and forced him to take a high school final examination. He passed it.

"She made me study," he said. "And pretty soon I didn't feel like such a fool when I was in a room full of people talking about something besides burlesque."

The Skeltons came to Hollywood three years ago, with Red earning $2,000 a week for 12 weeks in "Having a Wonderful Time." He was funny, but the picture was bad. You remember—Ginger Rogers and Doug Fairbanks, jr.

Back to the stage went Red and he went broke because he wouldn't accept any job under $1,000 a week. Edna made him stick to that.

Mickey Did It

Then he got a coast-to-coast radio program and soon he was clicking in vaudeville—and at Edna's price. She invested his money in real estate and kept on writing his jokes, and there was Red in Washington at the Earle Theater last winter when the Hollywood contingent arrived for the President's Birthday Ball.

"Edna says we came to Hollywood because she owned a pair of slacks and a mink coat and this was the only place she could wear 'em," Red said. "That isn't so. She was just making up a gag. What happened was that Mickey Rooney caught our show. He liked it. He went to Nick Schenck in New York about me. Then he went to Louis B. Mayer in Hollywood. So Metro brought me out here. Mickey is the boy who did it."

Plant to Boost Curtiss Output To 600 Planes a Month Opens

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14.—One of the most modernistic air defense factories in the United States, which will boost the Buffalo output of Curtiss pursuit planes to 300 a month, was dedicated today in the presence of Government officials and thousands of workmen.

The 6,000 a year production will be part of what William S. Knudsen, head of the Office of Production Management, said would be a grand total of 36,000 warplanes of all types a year rolling off American factory assembly lines by mid-1942.

That represents a jump of 1400 per cent in three years.

The new 18 million dollar plant on the edge of Buffalo's big airport —which is itself being expanded for defense purposes—already is in operation. Together with an older plant a few miles away, it employs 16,800.

The peak capacity between 22,000 and 25,000 will be on the pay roll of the two factories.

"Our plans, made last year, are beginning to materialize," remarked Knudsen at a press conference preceding the dedication ceremonies.

Others present included Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War; Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the Army Air Corps; Sir Henry Self, of the British Purchasing Commission, and Merrii C. Meigs, chief of the aircraft production section of the OPM.

Gen. Brett departed from a prepared address to remark that air power in the current European war and in future wars would be the deciding factor.

In a portion of his prepared address which he did not deliver, Gen. Brett said American Curtiss "Tommyhawk" planes had brought down about 25 "enemy" aircraft between May 15 and June 23.

Second Army Corps to Show Defense Against LightningWar

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 14.—How an army can fight off a blitzkrieg will be shown in two days of demonstration and mimic battle in the A. P. Hill Military Reservation next week by all antitank forces of the Second Army Corps.

These exercises, which will climax two weeks of training in antitank methods, will employ more than 7000 officers and men. Antitank units taking part will include new provisional antitank battalions of the Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Forty-fourth Divisions and the regimental antitank companies of each division and the 103th Antitank Battalion, Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Assisting them will be the Fifth Engineers from Fort Belvoir, the Seventy-first Coast Artillery (antiaircraft), Fort Story, Va.; reconnaissance troop, 104th Cavalry, Indiantown Gap, Pa.; 104th Observation Squadron, Frederick, Md., and part of the Seventieth Tank Battalion, Fort Meade. The tanks and armored cars of the 104th Cavalry will provide the mechanized attacking forces against which the antitank units will defend.

Cavalry in Combat

The two days of demonstration and maneuver will begin Tuesday at 7 a. m. with a demonstration of the use of cavalry to combat mechanized attack. Use of engineer troops to combat tanks with obstacles and blocks will be demonstrated from 8:30 to 9:30 and means and expedients available to Infantry from 9:30 to 10 and a similar demonstration for artillery from 10 to 10:15. From 10:15 to 10:45 antiaircraft artillery will demonstrate its means and expedients for antitank defense.

Tactics of mechanized attack will be shown with tanks and armored cars from 12 to 1 p. m. A demonstration of an antitank warning system will be given from 1 to 1:30 by the Fifty-first Signal Battalion.

All Arms to Combine

Then, for two and one-half hours, from 1:30 to 4:30, all arms will be combined in a demonstration of all-out defense against tanks and mechanized weapons. All demonstrations will be held in a natural amphitheater in the northwest corner of the reservation.

Tuesday night the Seventy-first Coast Artillery will demontrate use of searchlight sound locators and antiaircraft gun batteries in antitank defense.

Wednesday all troops will move into the field to fight out in practice the methods demonstrated the day before. They will simulate antitank defenses of a division threatened with a break-through by a mechanized force which has made its way across the Rappahannock River. All means, some which have been developed during exercises here, will be used to halt the tanks before they can punch their way through the division.

Antitank troops now in the A. P. Hill reservation will move back to their stations at the end of this week, making way for the Twenty-eighth Division, former National Guardsmen and selects from Pennsylvania.

Friend of Chiang Slain in Shanghai

Shanghai (Friday), Aug. 15 (AP).—Kenson Gee, Chinese banker who was known to have close connections with the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, was shot dead today by five terrorists in a crowded street in front of the American Club.

Police from the central station adjoining the club opened fire on the assassins, one of whom was wounded and captured. A Chinese pedestrian was killed by a stray shot and a woman was wounded.

At That Price It's Petrol

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 14 (AP).—A 2-cent increase today brought the price of gasoline to 64 cents a gallon.

Line Of Convenience

Senator McCarran's study of the District-Virginia boundary is unduly restricted. To be sure, it is important to end the controversy as to whether the new National Airport comes under the jurisdiction of the District or that of the Old Dominion. At the moment, however, that boundary dispute is overshadowed by the larger question of extending the Nation's Capital to the south shore of the Potomac. If the War Department is permitted to erect a building for 40,000 employes on the site of the old experimental farm on the Virginia side of the river, a boundary line placing the airport in the District could scarcely be drawn before it would need to be revised.

Nor is it likely that either problem can be solved by a mere study of where the unmarked District-Virginia line now lies. It is a well-known fact that most of the airport is in the District since the historic line is the high water mark on the Virginia side of the river and most of the airport is recently filled land. In these circumstances the Commissioners are fully justified in assuming jurisdiction over the airport. But the problem of establishing a boundary line remains. Some experts say, perhaps accurately, that the present unmarked line bisects the air terminal building. That is one reason why there has been agitation for a new line—a line of convenience.

Some time ago the National Capital Park and Planning Commission suggested that such a line be drawn along the existing south shore of the river. The idea of a line of convenience carries a strong appeal, but a boundary which would place the National Airport outside of the Capital it was built to serve could scarcely be said to answer that description. If a line of convenience is to be drawn today, it certainly ought to be on the other side of the airport. And if a permanent Government building is to be located on the south shore of the Potomac, that area should also be included in the District. The argument for retrocession of all Arlington County to the District has been greatly strengthened by the current trend of the city's growth. But if officials are not yet ready to ask Virginia to yield Arlington once more, they should at least be thinking in terms of a line of convenience that would include the area on the south Potomac shore already owned by the Government.

Bomber Offensive

In the jargon of the R. A. F., British mass sweeps over the continent are "just cake." The implication is, of course, that German air resistance is not nearly as tough as the British were led to expect. For this several explanations have been offered: 1. Luftwaffe strength has been overestimated. 2. The Soviet is keeping most of Germany's planes occupied in the east. 3. The Nazis are holding out of combat many of their planes in the west for reasons best known to themselves. 4. R. A. F. attacks on German industries are slowing up Nazi plane production. There is apparently a measure of truth in each of these explanations for it seems perfectly clear that the relentless British air attacks provoke surprisingly scant opposition or retaliation on the part of the Luftwaffe.

On Tuesday, for example, the R. A. F. carried out its biggest daylight offensive of the war, sending wave after wave of bombers over northern France and Germany. Long-range fighters are reported to have accompanied the bombers to Belgium and to have escorted them from Belgium back across the Channel. In a day and night of mass raiding, with many hundreds of planes participating, the R. A. F. reported the loss of only 12 bombers and 8 fighters. If this estimate is correct—and the R. A. F. has an extraordinary record for accuracy in these matters—British air superiority over western Europe as of today is a demonstrated fact.

Whether such superiority will continue depends on many factors, chief among which, of course, is British and American ability to match or outstrip German plane production. British air strategy is plainly directed toward the destruction of German industry. To accomplish this the British have asked for more and more American-built medium and heavy bombers like those which are already raiding German objectives. Tuesday's loss of 12 bombers may not seem serious considering the magnitude of the attack—indeed the British were doubtless prepared to accept a greater loss. But the R. A. F. must hope eventually to make Tuesday's monster attack a routine procedure. And to make that possible, bomber replacements will be needed on a scale which neither Britain nor this country is yet able to meet. The moral, so far as our own bomber production is concerned, should be crystal clear.

Two Men Meet

For sheer drama nothing that has happened in the field of diplomacy since the present war began equals the recent meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill somewhere at sea. In the past it was the Hitlers and Mussolinis of the world whose rendezvous monopolized the spotlight. On those occasions the peoples of democratic countries could only speculate uneasily as to where the totalitarian lightning would strike next or what new act of violence the lords of misrule would spring on a terrorized world. The shoe, happily, is now on the other foot. At last the leaders of the democracies are taking the initiative.

The meeting of Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill was one to stir the imagination of the world. For weeks the air has been full of rumors both as to new Axis aggressions and a new peace offensive to be launched by Hitler following the victorious entry of German troops into Moscow or Kiev or Leningrad or Odessa. Russian resistance has forced a postponement of such plans and stratagem. But the period of grace which the democracies have enjoyed, thanks to the Russians, may not last indefinitely. While hoping for the best, Britain and America must prepare for the worst. They must be prepared to see a deepening of the crisis rather than a lessening of the acute tensions of the present. That is why the discussions somewhere on the Atlantic were so much in order and why they may have constructive consequences of the greatest importance.

Certainly no amount of Goebbelsian propaganda and distortion can fully succeed in hiding from the German people the true meaning and significance of this historic meeting. The last two months have seen a stepping up of R. A. F. bombardments of German cities to the point where Nazi officials themselves admit that the German people are now in the front line of the war. With the United States solidly committed to support of the British cause, the German people have before them the prospect of more and more of the same punishment. It is a gloomy outlook. At the same time the meeting of the British and American leaders is a warning to the Japanese, who are manifesting a disposition to run amok, that any new aggression on their part will meet with powerful opposition. The fact that high ranking military, naval and air officials joined in the rendezvous at sea makes it clear that a greater coordination of effort between Great Britain and the United States is in prospect.

Hitler's strength hitherto has been derived in no small measure from his ability to divide his enemies and tackle them one by one. He now faces the exactly opposite situation. The Roosevelt-Churchill meeting will have the important effect of uniting his enemies. It will hearten the British and give hope and courage to the millions of people who have been living under the yoke of Nazi despotism. Our policy of supporting the British and those fighting on their side has now been dramatically reaffirmed. The President has committed his Administration to work for "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

The cooperative efforts the British and ourselves are making to carry out a common purpose are not to cease, moreover, once the war has been won. Inherent in the joint statement of aims issued by the President and Prime Minister is a pledge to continue this cooperation into the peace that is to follow the war. The nature of the peace which they hope to attain is only broadly outlined in the joint statement issued yesterday. Nothing more could be hoped for at present. This is not the time to write a full bill of particulars. But the philosophy which the eight-point program expounds is one that should have a very general appeal. It envisages a world from which the incubus of Hitlerism has been removed, a world in which those who have been conquered will have their "sovereign rights and self-government" restored, a world in which there will be free access to raw materials and trade on a basis of equality. It envisages the fullest measure of economic collaboration and the establishment of a system of peace "which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want."

Here is a strong appeal to all the conquered peoples of the world. The statement should appeal as well to the people of Germany, the first nation that Hitler subdued. It cannot be expected to give Stalin a thrill, for its sweeping terms discountenance territorial conquest undertaken by either Communists or Nazis. The Moscow government is doubtless more interested at the moment in the prospect of British-American aid in the fight against Hitler than in this statement of democratic aims. But it is well to have these guiding principles set forth clearly for the benefit of Moscow as well as Berlin. The peace which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt envisage is a peace in which the world would be freed from all tyranny and conquest. That is an ideal of breathtaking magnitude. Yet it is not too much to say that this historic exchange of views between the dynamic leaders of the British and American democracies, may constitute a turning point in the history of the war and of the world.

Veto In Order

A bill designed to "freeze" cotton and wheat stocks owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation has passed the House, following favorable Senate action, and awaits only the President's signature to become law. Having succeeded in boosting cotton and wheat prices by means of mandatory loans at 85 per cent of parity, the Congressional farm bloc is now trying to deprive the Administration of its most potent weapons of control so that prices can soar still higher. If this bill should be enacted, Commodity Credit could not release any of its reserve of cotton and wheat for domestic use, except for relief purposes. Instead of trying to curb runaway prices, Congress by this act would encourage them.

Such a deliberate attempt to create an increasingly "tight" market in cotton and wheat, when supplies are actually superabundant, utterly disregards the interests of consumers, to say nothing of taxpayers. In the long run, moreover, farmers themselves would stand to lose by such open flouting of the control principles upon which the farm program is based. Representative Gilchrist pointed out in the course of the debate that the loan stocks are built up in time of surplus supposedly for use in time of need. Legislation requiring the "freezing" of these stocks would, he warns, "be effective, all right, but not in helping farmers to keep their business on a stable level." In his words, it "would be effective in ruining a national cooperative farm program that is the only hope that farmers have to maintain their position in a world of economic chaos."

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has openly expressed his opposition to the "freezing" proposal, and Price Administrator Henderson has also indicated his disapproval of the plan because it conflicts with his price-control program. Under the circumstances a veto of the bill by the President is clearly in order. In view of the narrow margin by which the House approved the measure, the chances are excellent that a veto would be sustained.

Plastic Cars

For many years Henry Ford has been a firm believer in the use of agricultural products in industry. And now, with relatively little fanfare, his research men have produced a new car, the body and fenders of which are reported to contain as basic ingredients cotton, wheat, corn, soybeans and flax. The car was put on display for the first time the other day at Dearborn's fifteenth annual community festival. It is, of course, an experiment. But Ford officials claim that the plastics used are stronger and lighter, and that they can be built and maintained at less expense, than the metal bodies and fenders now in use.

These are familiar claims and have been advanced on behalf of countless other plastic objects. In some cars approximately 40 per cent of the instrument panels are already plastic and the trend has clearly been toward greater use of vegetable compounds not only for automobile accessories but also for electrical equipment, toilet articles and building materials, to mention only a few. Should the automobile industry eventually substitute plastics for metals in bodies and fenders (plastics lack the tensile strength of steel; hence they will not be used for frames, chassis, or motor blocks), it is estimated that steel consumption would be reduced by at least 10 per cent.

Obviously a substitute that would save several million tons of steel right now would be a godsend. But the sad truth is that, for all Mr. Ford's pioneering, this line of experimentation is still in its infancy. In spite of the steel shortage in this emergency, we shall probably continue using chiefly metal bodies and fenders at least for the present. If, over a period of years, plastics prove their all-around superiority over metals in withstanding the wear and tear of the road, the automobile industry will have another challenging job on its hands. For the technological implications of automobile plastics are plainly revolutionary.

STORMWAKE

Your voice that is a soft sweet thunder-tide
Beats in my ear with the full ocean's roar;
I am engulfed in a swift flood and wide;
I am upcast upon a lonely shore.

Here is an end of peace, and no abiding
For any hope of the long-dreamed repose;
Here are swift wings fit for a storm's riding—
Wherefore, in the hour when the white waters rose,

I had besought the wind that it be strong
To gather the blown billows ceaselessly,
That I should hear in my heart, day long, night long,
Your voice, the uncomforted crying of the sea.

To Save Gas

I wish to register my protest against the proposed gasoline rationing plan of Mr. Ickes.

In the first place, quite obviously, it is not necessary, to take such drastic steps, as rationing the gasoline at the rate of 5 gallons per week. Ickes, or his aides, told us, if we would consume one third less than normally, the rationing would be averted. Now, is our average consumption only about 8 gallons per week? In other words, if gas must be rationed, why should it be cut down the extent indicated by Mr. Ickes? Why not cut it down, so the average consumer will drop the required one third and no more? The plan of cutting us down to 5 gallons weekly will cut the average down nearly 90 per cent, or will be forcing us to save 90 per cent, and not the 33 per cent Mr. Ickes asked us to save.

In the second place, why can't our idle tank cars be pressed into service, and attached to the rear of our fast passenger trains, which must run anyway, and in this way get gasoline to New England, or the other affected States, with little or no more cost than formerly. How will it cost a railroad a great deal more to run a dozen tank cars on the rear of its fast passenger trains? The train has to run anyway, the crew has to be paid, the road bed has to be maintained, the signal system has to operate anyway.

National defense, is important, but fully as important as national defense, or rather, a part of national defense, is morale, which must be kept as high as is humanly possible, if all our preparedness programs are really to succeed. To ration the gas to the motorist, and allow such tremendous waste of gas, as we see in palatial yachts, and in big trailer trucks, parked with their engines running, and a thousand and one other wastes of gas, certainly is to be no tonic for the morale of the general public.

It makes my blood boil to hear of "rationing talk," and at the same time see yachts enjoying the full unrestricted use of gas or diesel fuel. This is not fair to the motorist, it is not promoting national defense, and is in no way, shape, or fashion, a necessity, and if the gas to private motorists must be rationed, then the gas supply to private yachts, should be entirely prohibited, and not merely rationed.

In the United States, on the Eastern seaboard alone, we have nearly 20 well known shore resorts, and in the harbors of each, you will find from 5 to 25 large, palatial yachts, each of which will use more petroleum fuel in one trip, than most motorists will use in a season. I repeat, abolish all forms of amateur yachting, fishing, and boating, allowing only the commercial forms of these endeavors to continue, and you will save enough gas, to entirely obviate the gas shortage here in the East.

The matter of taxicabs comes up now. Mr. Ickes says all taxicabs will be allowed to buy all the gas they need! What a statement to push down the motorist's throat! This is supposed to be a gas saving campaign, and not a campaign to force us to ride in taxicabs, or other public conveyances. Why should a taxicab be allowed to buy large amounts of gas, just to take a bunch of "400ers" to the "first nights," or to the races, or some other equally foolish and "screwy" party? Does Mr. Ickes actually mean to tell us that a taxicab will go the same distance that a private car will go, and use less gas in so doing? Is this fair to the motorist? Taxi drivers must eat, and hence, should work, but, by the same token, gas station attendants, and persons in the vacation business, and the automotive trades, and allied business enterprises, must eat, and hence, must work.

$21 A Month

I am wondering who our country really belongs to since the war started over in Europe.

Our President and Congress instituted the draft on the youth of the land at $21 per month and keep. They tell us we must have men, ships and airplanes in order to defeat all who dare molest us. I quite agree with this setup but here is the catch or joker in all this one-sided affair.

If I am a soldier at $21 a month and keep, and the occasion arises where I must fight, why should I, or we, get out and fight and risk our lives when thousands of others remain at home and draw down fat salaries working in factories, offices, many in business for themselves? These workers at home earn $21 a week and up. Businessmen earn thousands to millions of dollars a year—while the soldiers, if war comes, are earning a meager $21 per month and keep, and not only defend themselves but those who are not in military service.

If the soldiers are only worth $21 and keep, then it is a sure thing that those not in military service are not worth any more. I move that Congress rewrite the draft to include all men and women from 18 years to 100 years old inclusive, including all Federal, State, city and county officials, and employes with no exceptions, paying each and every one $21 a month and keep and use all the profits, dividends and differences between what each earns now and the $21 a month, the soldiers' pay, for the defense of our country. We can then do away with all taxation.

Come on Americans, think this over. What is good for the goose is also good for the gander. Let's tell our officials what to do and not let them tell us what to do. As we are paying them their salaries, they are working for us and not we working for them.

Steel Priority

The Post of August 10 reports the placing of steel production under 100 per cent priority control. The condition requiring this drastic action makes it clear that the step should have been taken months ago.

You mention that the present rate of steel production completely invalidates the reports of Mr. Gano Dunn. It also destroys the claim to either wisdom or patriotism of the Iron & Steel Institute. In fact, the desire for comparative normalcy on the part of the steelmen, and the thirst for profits of their financial masters is revealed for what it is: A willingness to sacrifice America and all the best that it stands for to profit. If this is not aiding Hitler I can't imagine what would.

Part of this picture of business selfishness is the studied disregard by the dollar-a-year men of labor's plans for production expansion. I refer to the Murray Plan for steel, the Reuther Plan for the aircraft and auto industry, and the Zonarich Plan for aluminum expansion. It would appear that expansion is, and always has been, in the interest of labor and national defense, but not in accord with the desires of the profiteers.

Representatives of the American people must replace the dollar-a-year boys in the direction of our "arsenal of democracy" effort. Industry-Government-labor councils should be tried at once. The steel episode certainly proves that the business-as-usual crowd have neither the ability nor the desire to do the job.

Republican Suicide

If the Republican Party had deliberately chosen to commit suicide, it could not have picked a more appropriate method than the statement issued at Alexandria Bay by "15 prominent Republicans."

It would be well to remind these people that the founder of the Republican Party, Abraham Lincoln, did exactly what they are accusing President Roosevelt of doing today. In other words, entered into war without the consent of Congress. The first active step of the Civil War was the relief expedition to Fort Sumter ordered by Lincoln without any action by Congress.

They might reflect on the portion of the Constitution which vests the President with the authority of Commander in Chief of the armed forces. As such he has full authority to send the Army or the Navy wherever he thinks necessary for the adequate defense of the United States and its interests. There are many historical instances of the use of this power without the expressed authority of Congress and some in defiance of it. Nevertheless, in spite of repeated Presidential use of this power, we are not a dictatorship as the 15 imply will be the case if it is used by President Roosevelt. On the contrary, democratic government is far more likely to be undermined and lost if the country is too craven to defend it than if it is too active in its defense.

Democratic government is also in danger when the citizens of a country permit themselves to become so confused by the complexity of issues that they lose sight of the main issue. These 15 apparently would prefer to have Nazi tyranny and aggression triumph in the world than to defend democracy by sending aid to and receiving it from Soviet Russia. Would they have criticized Washington for accepting the aid of the despotic French monarchy to help democracy in this country gain its independence. Would they have said at Yorktown, "We can defeat Cornwallis if we accept the help of the French fleet. But France is ruled by a dreadful tyrant. We prefer not to win the battle." It is exactly that course which they advocate today. Are they so literal-minded that everything must be black or white before they can decide? Are there no shades of gray?

The 15 admit that this country's security demands a British victory, yet they are too craven to assume any risks in aiding Britain. They would prefer our guns and tanks, which they say England should have, lie at the bottom of the ocean rather than be used in democracy's front line.

They know it is to the interest of the United States to have totalitarian aggression defeated so that we can again live peacefully and securely, but if any sacrifices are involved, then it would be better to have Hitler win and the world saddled with a triumphant Nazi ideology; would be better not to have democracy than to assume any risks in its defense.

Gas Substitute

In the present emergency of gasoline it seems highly advisable to use all the transportation facilities at our command. The railroads seem all but forgotten as a means of reaching the heart of the downtown section. Several Government buildings housing tens of thousands of employes during working hours are within easy walking distance of the Union Station. When residing at Takoma Park I found it very convenient to travel by train to reach my office.

The Post Impressionist

When Soft Voices Die

This is for those who knew Lawrence Gilman—not those, necessarily, who knew him in the flesh, for they, in comparison, were few, but those who remember his written word and his voice on the air. Especially it is for those, like myself, who still miss his radio comments on symphonic music and his name on the concert program. Many times, until you had read his program notes, you wondered indeed what you were listening to, for he had a knack not only of telling you what the music was all about if you needed to be told, but of telling it urbanely, enthusiastically, and with genuine insight.

Lawrence Gilman died nearly two years ago, on September 3, 1939, at the age of 61. The newspaper for which he served as music critic for 16 years—the New York Herald Tribune—carried his obituary on its front page; but elsewhere the notice of his death was pretty much lost in the ugly news of a then week-old war. But he was mourned by musicians great and small, from Toscanini on down, and by those who grew to depend on his distinguished criticism as it appeared in the daily press.

Highest tributes were paid him by the musical world. On the Sunday following his death the N. B. C. Symphony Orchestra played the overture to "Oedipus Tyrannus," by John Knowles Paine, as a memorial to Mr. Gilman. The C. B. S. Orchestra, at its concert the same day, played another of his favorite compositions—the Liebestod, the finale of Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde." On Saturday night, October 21, the N. B. C. Orchestra, under Toscanini, broadcast several of Gilman's favorites, including the Good Friday Spell from "Parsifal." Samuel Chotzinoff, Gilman's colleague, wrote of his performance: "This is a score which the writer and critic loved deeply, and its choice as a memorial was peculiarly fitting. It never sounded so tender and so devoutly innocent as it did Saturday, as Mr. Toscanini, himself moved by the rite he was performing, made his orchestra sing of the eternally recurring resurrection of nature."

Lawrence Gilman was far more than a music critic. He was a scholar, with a great deal of the poet in him, and above all he knew what it meant to be a real lover of music. It is told that once in his youth he saved nickels and dimes for many weeks to accumulate $18 to buy a conductor's score of "Tristan und Isolde." His conception of the nature of a true music lover was epitomized on one occasion when he said, "The following fair and searching questions might be asked of him who claims to be passionately fond of music: Will he forgo leisure, forget to eat, face poverty? Will the blood leave his face as he listens to the third Leonore Overture or the finale of Schubert's C major symphony?"

Gilman was self-taught in musical theory, orchestration, composition, organ and piano. He tried his hand as a composer and composed three settings for voice and piano for poems by W. B. Yeats. But this was not his forte, and he did not aspire to be a musician. His technical knowledge was the indispensable background for his marvelous interpretive powers. He was the power to understand music, as nearly as it can be understood, better, probably, than most of those who perform it. His standards of criticism were high, and he held to them uncompromisingly; he could never tolerate Euterpe's debasement. He was happy when the public preferred good music to bad. As his own paper said of him, "He was never happier than when acclaiming good music. Conversely, there must have been for him not a few sad moments as he contemplated the wholesale cheapness that passes in this world under the hallowed name of music.

His talent, though, was not alone one of understanding music, but also of communicating and interpreting. His prose was distinguished; it was imaginative, overtonic and rhythmical. It was never shoddy. Often it soared beyond the realm of exposition into that of poetry. Here are, for example, three sentences from a program note on Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony: "It has the deathless charm of all motion that is unvexed, spontaneous, perfectly released—the flight of wild swans across an autumn sky, the ripple of wind-swept corn, a gale through April woods, the running of mountain water. Beethoven patterned after Nature in setting his rhythms to a varying pace. This music is full at times of the ungovernable ecstasy of some pristine and magically recovered spring, the sudden laughter of dryads in immemorial woods, the exquisite gayety of the vernal earth; or it has at other times the grave pace of some commemorative ritual, evoking an elegiacal and mournful beauty, 'as if veils were dropped, one by one, on a great ceremony.'"

Often, during 1933 to 336, I used to listen to Gilman's Sunday afternoon intermission comments for the New York Philharmonic broadcasts. Sometimes he read manuscript of what had already appeared in his department the previous week, and one could follow the print as he read his mellifluous sentences. He had one of the most distinguished and beautiful voices I ever heard on the air, though to some it seemed harsh. He was one intermission commentator I never turned off.

I cannot quite describe his style, but I think it owed its impressiveness to the man's entire uncondescension. He forgot that he was a journalist, and wrote as he felt. And, be it said, he felt deeply, and so his words were moving, modest and authoritative. His criticisms were more than criticisms—they were creations, and today amply worth going back to. In all he wrote 13 books in addition to his hundreds of newspaper columns. He will, of course, be known partly for these, but also for the high standards he set for musical criticism in America. Leopold Stokowski said: "Lawrence Gilman was one of America's great men. An ideal critic with real understanding of the inner nature of music. A poet in his use of language, with genuine unforced humor. He cannot be replaced, because he was unique." Whoever came under his spell will know that that is so.

Meeting Defense Costs

By Ernest Lindley

Dangers Of Tax Compromise

BY COMING OUT for a broader income tax base, the Treasury has brought the tax proposals much more nearly in line with the views of economists who are anxious about inflation. The Ghllup Poll bears out the contention that citizens now exempt from income tax are willing to pay a share of the cost of national defense in this visible form.

LINDLEY

Senator Brown of Michigan, however, objects. He favors sales taxes on luxury goods. Against broadening the income tax base, Senator Brown makes the argument that the cost of collecting numerous small amounts eats up most of the modest amount of additional revenue that will be brought in. His estimate of the administrative cost is considerably higher than any the Treasury vouches for, even when the present income tax forms are used. Anyway, the cost can be held down, and time saved for the taxpayer, by a simple way of computing the tax, as suggested by the President and Secretary Morgenthau.

A modified sales tax, or a series of excise taxes, along the line suggested by Senator Brown, is favored, though, by many of the experts who are working on the inflation problem. They believe that it should be in addition to broadening the income tax base.

This is because, even with lowered exemptions, the income tax probably will cut into savings more than into living standards. To avert inflation, civilian buying must be kept within certain limits.

According to one calculation, more than half the income tax paid by persons receiving $5,000 a year or more comes out of money they would otherwise save.

The Iowa State College economists, whose general views have won the support of many others, make this comparison:

Suppose you set out to reduce spending by the general public by $3.1 billion. This would require about $10 billion in income taxes—which, reckoned at a flat rate, would be 33 per cent on top of present taxes, after family exemptions had been cut in half.

Or, it would mean $7.75 billion in sales taxes, with food exempted or about $7.5 billion in a general sales tax.

Such sales taxes would reduce spending heavily below the $2,500 income levels but very little in the income levels above $5,000. On incomes of from $2,500 to $5,000 the effect of the sales taxes and the income tax increase would be about the same.

Lowered exemptions and higher tax rates will make the income tax slice leave more into money in the hands of the public that otherwise would be spent. But it is doubtful that any plan, short of abolishing personal exemptions altogether, can make the income tax dig deep enough to avert inflation single-handed.

To complete the tax defense against inflation, most experts think that sales taxes in some form are necessary. If their forecasts are correct, such taxes are as desirable socially now as they were undesirable during the long years of depression and half-speed operation of our economic system.

There is plenty of food in the country. There is no need to tax the bare essentials of life. Expert opinion leans, therefore, toward a multiplication of excise taxes, or a graduated sales tax with numerous exemptions. They should fall first, and heaviest, on articles which compete directly with national defense for materials and labor. Secondly, they could be levied on a long list of non-essentials, including higher-priced clothing.

The Treasury's awakening to the danger improves the chances of getting a tax bill which will tend to check inflation. But it is vitally important to every citizen that the new taxes—together with the price control bill—go far enough to do the job.

As Secretary Morgenthau told the Senate Finance Committee, if prices go up sharply, the real income of the average citizen will be cut—even more perhaps than if everyone paid taxes heavy enough to head off the price increases. But there is danger that the average citizen will be hurt both ways: by heavier taxes and a big increase in living costs, due to the failure to adopt anti-inflation measures that are drastic enough. This is a case where a feeble compromise might be worse than forgetting about new taxes and letting nature take its course.

U. S. Vow To Destroy Tyranny May Mean War, Dr. Walsh Says

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service, yesterday contributed to The Post his views on the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration. Dr. Walsh asserted:

"The dramatic conference between the President of the United States and the prime minister of the British government serves to clarify several issues of vital importance to the people of the United States. It took place at sea—a circumstance which sets it off from the frequent meetings of Hitler and Mussolini which take place in Germany or in the Brenner Pass. The two most formidable sea powers have now ranged themselves in closer alliance against the Axis powers now controlling so much of the land areas of the globe. The influence of sea power on the future history of the world is symbolized and reaffirmed in a manner to implement strongly the celebrated doctrines of Admiral Alfred T. Mahan.

"But the symbolism is overshadowed by the concrete consequences. Since the exchange of United States destroyers for bases in the Caribbean and elsewhere, and particularly since the lend-lease legislation, followed by the occupation of Greenland and Iceland, the Government of the United States has been in a state of defensive alliance with Great Britain. Those who oppose that policy have honestly believed they had legitimate cause, both constitutional and ethical, for complaint and protest. It must be remembered, however, that the treaty-making body, the Senate of the United States, passed the lend-lease bill and authorized the President of the United States to enter into practical alliance with any government whatsoever.

"It matters little that the word 'treaty' was not used by Congress to describe the executive agreements he was authorized to make. They involved reciprocal obligations on the part of the recipient, constituting thereby an international agreement between two sovereign powers which is the sum and substance of a treaty. The President was authorized to make such agreements at his sole discretion, the only reservation being that he shall report to Congress at stated intervals. The President, consequently, received from the elected representatives of the American people a constitutionally certified blank check which he might fill in as he deemed necessary for the defense and common welfare of the United States. Up to the last few days he has exercised his powers within the broad framework of defense measures and our present mobilization has been conducted as a necessary stage in that national defense.

"In my opinion, that phase was definitely terminated the moment the President of the United States issued a joint statement with Prime Minister Churchill. The language of the Declaration changes our previous defensive relations into an out-and-out offensive alliance with Great Britain. Witness the war aims jointly defined, the assertions regarding restoration of territories to peoples who have been forcibly deprived of them by aggressor nations, the pledges to effect a more equitable distribution of essential raw materials, the guarantees of social security, freedom of the seas and a stable peace economy.

"But most significant and historic is the proposition in Section Six that the Nazi tyranny must first be destroyed. This has been said before, rhetorically. Now it is said jointly and officially by England and the United States. Finally, the eighth and closing section of this new Anglo-American alliance states categorically that aggressor nations must be disarmed as a prerequisite to future peace. The only way to disarm a group of swooping aggressors employing force, is to disarm them by superior force. It no longer suffices to mobilize against further possible aggressions from their side. The President has signed an agreement to cooperate in disarming them anyhow and immediately. The cost, the manner and the military implications are obvious. This latest development is the logical and inescapable sequel of American policy since 1939.

"The next step, I suspect, will depend upon what France may do. If Marshal Petain's decision to align France with Germany is followed by her active military participation on the German side, active participation will doubtless follow swiftly on the American side. The same may be said respecting Japan. There is a faint possibility that this Joint Declaration, in its economic paragraphs (4 and 5), offers Herr Hitler the alternative of a negotiated peace before the full weight of the United States is thrown against him. But a reading of the next paragraph, with its assumption that the Nazi tyranny must be destroyed, would seem to cancel out any such interpretation. All told, the people of the United States can hardly look forward to anything but war, unless an eleventh hour miracle of nature or divine grace intervenes."

Union Sabotage

I ASSUME that nobody will argue against the notorious fact that there has been vast sabotage of the war effort through union strikes in shipyards, airplane plants, steel mills and the like, while young men by the thousands have been vanishing from home into the Army and Navy and most of the civilians have been fumbling for something helpful to do beyond paying heavy taxes and doing without.

Who is responsible for this? Who is the boss saboteur?

It would be idle to go howling after any individual Communist or common racketeer of the familiar A. F. of L. type, or any group of them. For a moment's thought will remind any intelligent person that they could be stopped in an hour if the Government of this country really desired to stop them. And a moment's thought will reveal the melancholy fact that the National Government has not only refused to stop them, except in one conspicuous case in California, but also has blocked every effort to enact new laws, or amendments to old ones, whereby the Department of Justice would have unmistakable authority, indeed an urgent public duty, to stop these strikes.

THE NATIONAL Government of the United States has sold the common man into bondage in the unions, driven hundreds of thousands of citizens into silent, frightened captive ranks under the rule of extortioners, terrorists, killers and traitors, and has had the effrontery to speak of this wicked betrayal of free people as "labor's gain."

The same men who were capable of such mighty indignation over the robbery of frugal little people who lost their savings to the great swindlers of the Republican boom, have had not one word to say in pity for these new victims of the new tyranny and robbery whose stories have been related in pathetic detail in print and before a sub-committee of Congress almost daily for more than two years. There are anti-kick-back laws on the books, but those men who have proclaimed in the corny tremolo of the guileful demagogue their righteous hatred of all oppression, have made no move to compel the refund of a single dollar wrung from the hands of dirt-poor American workers by licensed brigands who stationed themselves astride the roads and gates leading to defense projects and brutally robbed their victims under the very eyes of American soldiers.

NOT ONE DOLLAR has the American Government recovered for these little people, nor has the Department of Justice found any law by which to punish even one such brigand for extortion.

There is a cunning method in all this sabotage and oppression. Charge the Government with connivance and the reply is a cry for "unity" and "cooperation," plus a plea that Congress, in its wisdom, has not seen fit to enact laws to cover the offenses. But, let some Congressman or committee of Congress bring out such a proposal, and the National Government, judging by past performances, will go into action under cover, by phone, by word of mouth, by intimation that there must be no legislation to repeal so much as a comma of "labor's gains." And having defeated the remedial proposals, the Government then could say that, although wise men on the Hill had recognized the lack of laws, Congress had refused to act.

But let it be observed and marked boldly for reference and guidance that not one person in that circle known as "The Administration," where "labor's gains" are spoken of so lovingly, has demanded, or even admitted the necessity for, any corrective legislation. The same group who were capable of such moist and angry pity for the little stockholders and pictured them as widows and orphans for dramatic appeal, have had no pity for thousands of small Americans who have had to pay from $25 to $300 for the right to work on defense jobs or in other employment.

THE SAME GROUP that exhorts the people to use less gasoline and buy bonds for defense, and drums the sons of American families into camps to soldier with broomsticks and stovepipes, will permit no legislation which would break the power of unioneers who organize mobs at the factory gates to prevent loyal workers from turning out shooting guns and ships, propellers, planes and tanks.

What are the young men training to defend in these camps where they go through childish motions with mock weapons, like little boys playing Indian? For whose benefit are all the other sacrifices exhorted? All are sacrificing for the benefit of a few professional conspirators whose privilege has been placed above the national safety, above the lives and human rights of the whole American people. And so it will go for an indefinite time, because you may be absolutely sure that the National Government will seek to prevent the adoption of any laws by Congress to impair the sacred right of sabotage so mockingly described as "labor's gains."

Though the Nation fall, the right of sabotage must be preserved.

An Angel's Good Deed

By Mark Sullivan

8 Points Contain Few Promises

HAD a good angel attended Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill as they met to write their Eight Points; had he been really a good angel, with a strain of austerity, no mere comforter or yes-sayer, that angel would have put his final admonition in one sentence: Be sure you make no promises, unless you are absolutely certain they can be lived up to.

The first test to be applied to these Eight Points is: To what extent are they promises? If they contain promises, is it absolutely certain they can be lived up to?

Of all the causes of the world's present travail, the most devastating is the loss of peoples' faith in the promises of statesmen and governments. Over and over during the present generation, peoples have seen governments make contracts, leaders hold out assurances, create hopes. Over and over, peoples have believed, have felt the exaltation of faith. Over and over they have been let down. Over and over the exaltation of faith has turned to the bitterness and cynicism of disillusion. And that disillusion, that spiritual blight, is the principal cause of the world's disease. The cure will take long. First there must be a generation of statesmen who are careful about promises; then there must be a long experience of seeing all promises kept, until peoples gradually recover their faith.

CONSIDER the somber record, beginning in 1914. Germany signed a treaty to respect the neutrality of Belgium, then called the treaty a "scrap of paper" and invaded Belgium. Wilson was reelected President upon a slogan (put out by his party, not himself) which said "He kept us out of war," with the implication that he would continue to keep us out—and Wilson went to war within five months after he was reelected. Wilson said we were going to war "to make the world safe for democracy," and the war was followed by widespread destruction of democracy. Wilson gave out the Fourteen Points; Germany accepted them, they became part of the armistice contract, but France and Britain made Wilson violate at least two of them. Wilson promised the world a League of Nations, but America would not join; the League failed nations and peoples who relied on it, finally faded away.

Those broken promises of the Great War and the peace that ended it were followed by 20 years of treaties sometimes not lived up to—the Nine Power Pact, the Kellogg-Briand treaties; promises broken or hopes disappointed in the economic field—"new economic era," "new economic plateau," from which prices would never descend; promises of governments to redeem their currency in gold, the promise of our own Government to pay its bonds in gold. Just now, promises made last year by both party platforms and both Presidential candidates, that American soldiers would not be sent to fight outside the Western Hemisphere are an embarrassment to our military efficiency, a contributing cause of our widespread mood of apprehension. It does not matter that most of these promises were made in good faith, nor that in most cases the breach was not willful. The hurt to people's faith has been equally devastating.

HAPPILY the Eight Points do not to any great degree take the form of promises. The angel of caution appears to have been present. There is no tender held out to Germany that if she will take a certain course, the Allies will make peace. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill have resisted any temptation to proclaim to Germany that if she would get rid of Hitler, peace would be easy, as Wilson promised Germany about getting rid of the Kaiser.

It is significant and fortunate that in all the Eight Points, the word "promise" does not appear, nor any equivalent word. The Eight Points are expressed in terms of hope and aspiration. The following words appear an aggregate of 11 times: "Hope," 3; "wish," 2; "desire," 2; "believe," 2; "endeavor," 1; "aid," 1; "encourage," 1.

Point 2—"no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned"—sounds much like Wilson's "self-determination of small peoples." That caused Wilson much trouble, the world much grief. Some of the new small nations set up, and new boundaries laid out, at the peace conference following the Great War, were economically or otherwise illogical, and did not last. Racial minorities are a perpetual bedevilment to world planners.

POINT 3—"Sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them"—means restoration of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, and the other small European nations conquered by Germany. This has been, as respects England, a specific pledge, from the beginning of the war. In the present document, it is a "wish." It is only as a wish that we can unite in it. If England's pledge to Poland and others necessitates use of troops on the soil of Europe, England must supply them.

Point 4 needs clarifying. It reads: " . . . Enjoyment . . . of access on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity." If that merely means expansion, on a world-wide basis, of Secretary Hull's system of reciprocal trade agreements, it may be practicable. But if it means a world economically reconstructed in such a way that all nations shall have a high uniform standard of living, it must be regarded as a pious aspiration.

Today's News Sidelight

Fall of Odessa Would Cripple South Russia's Grain Trade

Capture of Odessa, now reported isolated by German panzer divisions, would strike a crippling blow to Southern Russia's grain trade, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. While the port has been forced in recent years to share with newer neighbors the virtual monopoly it once held over Ukrainian shipping, it still is an important peacetime market.

"Odessa is so far west in the Ukraine that it is not an ideal center for exporting wheat. Nicolaev, on the Bug River, and Kherson, near the mouth of the Dnieper, are farther east and therefore more centrally situated. Railroad connections from the heart of the vast farming area favor those river ports, too.

Harbor Ice-Free

Odessa's sizeable harbor, protected by long breakwaters, nevertheless has advantages over the newer ports to the east. It is so open that ice forms in it only during exceptionally cold winters, and then for only a few days. Icebreakers keep the harbor open at such times. Shipping centers along rivers a short distance inland are more subject to ice blockades.

"Moreover, when Odessa held an unchallenged position as head of Russia's Black Sea trade, excellent harbor facilities were developed. Grain elevators, warehouses, cold-storage plants, and ship repair yards were built. There is a special section in the harbor for the importation of oil from the Caucasus fields between the Black and the Caspian Seas.

City Grows Industrially

"Despite the reduction in its share of grain shipments, Odessa has continued to show progress because of the increase in its industry. The output of its factories is varied, ranging from foodstuffs, airplanes, and munitions to footwear, metal products, glass, and bricks. Growth of the factories has brought in many workmen from other parts of Russia. This is borne out by the fact that only about a quarter of Odessa's 604,000 residents now are Ukrainians, who by nature are farmers rather than artisans.

"The port's appearance is striking to persons approaching it from the sea. Most of the city stands on a bluff overlooking Odessa Bay. From the waterfront road, arched stairways lead up the cliff. Once Odessa was known as the 'beauty of all Imperial Russian cities' because of its well-designed layout and its Empire-style buildings."

Britain May Order 25,000 Miners to Work

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—Faced with a potentially serious coal shortage, the government was reported today to be planning to order 25,000 miners to return to their pits by September 1 in addition to 15,000 who are returning voluntarily.

The government is guaranteeing miners a wage amounting to about $18 a week. Miners now are forbidden to take other employment.

Biggest Lift

Dear Ma.

I am inclosing a clipping witch has gave me the biggest lift since I was drafted. It is from Camp Stewart down in Georgia and it says that a colonel named Ralph Tobin of the 207th Coast Artillery came out against potato pealing in the army. He said he didn't think a soldier should ever wash a dish neither as both take time that could be used in learning how to fight. Well this man Tobin is my choice for top general in the U. S. A. If this clipping gets read much he will be the hero of the army in no time.

* * * *

This colonel says the German army used a separate organization of kitchen workers to peel potatus and wash dishes and, ma, that is the key to the way them Nazis fight I gess. With a guaranty that they won't never never have to do no work as kitchen canaries no wonder there morale is so good. He gave a hint that the American Army wood organize a trained division of kitchen help soon and I hope he is right. It wood improve the spirit of the whole army and me so much that you wood never no we was the same fellows.

* * * *

I do not no if there is anything except talk behind this idea but I wish you would mention it in your prayers every night as I am sure the army wood be in better shape to win a war if it could get potatoes, dishes, cooking and general housework off its mind.

I also wish ma that the army would organize a division of street cleaners and bathroom attendants two on account of that is no work for a soldier neither. It is awful hard for me to feel like a 100 per cent fighting man when I am walking up and down a camp spearing old papers and picking up general rubbish. And I certainly do not feel like no important cog in the arsenal of the democrats when I am in a scrub bucket brigade in the men's room.

* * * *

They call this fatigue duty in the army and the man who first thought up this name for it had a great sense of word values. It fatigues me to even think of army housework. I do not get half so tired on an all day hike as I do just thinking of peeling another barrel of potatus or washing dishes.

If I was not a private I would write a letter to Col. Tobin saying he is the first smart general the army ever had and that I was for him for President, Secretary of War and the hero of the next Sergeant York picture but it might get me into trouble like most of my letters do. I wish you and pop would write him and get all the neighbors to do it. Believe me it has puzzled me how the Heinies could take all those Maggienot lines and forts so quick but the hole secret is out. They could concentrate on it instead of on potato peeling.

Well, this will half to be all for now. Lots of love. OSCAR.

P. S.—Could you find out the adddress of Myrtle Atwood for me.

A study shows that one in six shoppers at department stores travels by auto. And these are in every case, we suspect, the ones that look so exhausted as they enter the store. And just buy some aspirin.

Victory And Beyond

The Churchill-Roosevelt Meeting

IT WAS EMINENTLY fitting that when Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt finally met the meeting should have taken place on a warship somewhere in the mid-Atlantic. That ocean, which washes the shores both of Great Britain and the United States, is vital to the security of both.

NOVER

Should it fall into the control of a hostile power, the Atlantic would cease being a highway for the British and become a trap. And it is only as long as that control remains in friendly hands that the United States and the Western Hemisphere can feel safe.

Precisely for this reason our policy is, and for some time has been, one of all-out aid to Britain. The same strategic considerations explain our concern over what is taking place in Vichy, where, in view of Marshal Petain's surrender, West Africa may become a German province and Dakar a base of operations for Nazi submarines and bombing planes in the South Atlantic. Yet our vital interests extend beyond the Atlantic as well. The war has now spread over three continents and two oceans. Japan's aggressions in Asia are linked to German aggressions in Europe. We cannot afford to oppose Hitler and at the same time not oppose the Japanese. And that is equally true of the British.

IT CAN BE TAKEN for granted, therefore, that the Roosevelt-Churchill conversations covered a wide range. The joint statement issued on Thursday reveals that the two men and their advisers canvassed the problem of the supply of munitions of war for the armed forces of the United States "and for those countries actively engaged in resisting aggression," discussed the threat to the world arising from Hitler's actions and the actions of the Japanese and, taking a leap into the future, considered and agreed upon the essentials of the peace they would like to see established in the world when the Nazi tyranny has finally been destroyed.

It is of very real significance, in this connection, that the bulk of the joint communique which the two statesmen issued had to do not with war but with peace. It is no less significant to note that they take a victory over Germany for granted.

IN PART, no doubt, this reflects the sanguine disposition both of the American Chief Executive and of the British prime minister. But these two men are also realists. They do not underestimate the dangers that still confront the world, the miseries that must still be lived through before the goal of a victorious peace is achieved. The very circumstance, therefore, that they have placed their emphasis on peace terms rather than on war measures indicates that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill feel certain that all-out cooperation between Great Britain and the United States will assure victory.

This fact is realized by others, too. Increased American assistance to the nations fighting the Axis scourge has been like the breath of life to the captive peoples of Europe. By the same token it has created doubts and misgivings and alarm in Germany which, unless they can be removed, ultimately spell disaster for the Nazis. That is one of the principal reasons why Hitler found it necessary to launch an attack on Russia before having eliminated Great Britain. That explains the intense and apparently not unsuccessful pressure to which he has subjected the Vichy regime so as to bring France and the French Empire completely within the "new order." And it is for the same reason that he has been egging on the Japanese to embark on new adventures in the Pacific area.

THE JOINT STATEMENT issued by Roosevelt and Churchill constitutes a far-reaching program of action but a program of action that cannot be put into force today or tomorrow but only after Hitler has been defeated. Its immediate importance is to be found in its value as an immensely skillful piece of anti-Axis propaganda.

The eight-point program of the British and American statesmen is no carefully worked-out blueprint for the future. It is vague and nebulous in many of its particulars. Nonetheless it may have far-reaching repercussions not only in Occupied Europe but in Germany as well. For while holding out to the conquered peoples the hope of restoration of their independence and nationhood it also holds out to the people of Germany something like a promise that a defeat of the Third Reich will not mean the partition of that country.

The second point of the Roosevelt-Churchill program declares that "they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the people concerned." In addition the new world order which the two leaders envisage is one which "will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want." To such a program all men of good will can give their assent.

IN THE MEANTIME the fact will now increasingly be borne home to the German people that Hitler's program of divide and rule has at last come a cropper. The meeting of Churchill and Roosevelt is spectacular proof that the two nations these statesmen represent are determined to work together for the duration of the crisis and after. The meaning and significance of this fact cannot be discounted even by the cleverest of Axis propagandists nor kept out of the consciousness of the peoples of Germany, Italy, Japan and their satellites by the most rigorous system of suppression.

For some time it has been rumored that Hitler was about to hold a "conference of European nations" the purpose of which would be to ratify and install the "new order." Before he had a chance to carry out this scheme the wind has been taken out of his sails by the statesmen of the English-speaking democracies. This time, at least, Hitler has really missed the boat.

No Place Like Home For Serving Meals

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

MANY women would prefer facing a barrage of newspaper photographers any day t oentertaining a few women at a meal in their home. They seem to realize that there is no place where a woman reveals herself as quickly as she does when serving a meal in her home.

But such is not the case with several Washington hostesses with whom The Washington Post Food Editor has come in contact these humid summer days. These hostesses have gone merrily on their way enjoying the amenities of eating, rather than giving the alibi of "this wilting Washington weather."

Martha Ellyn

Recently, when the thermometer was flirting with the 100 degree mark—and the humidity was not far behind—Mrs. Alexander George, 6517 Thirty-second Street Northwest, invited guests to lunch because the time seemed "ripe" for getting certain friends together.

Mrs. George is one whose food creed is: "Simple food, interestingly cooked, attractively served with taste and imagination." In this hostess' opinion, a colorless table is no inspiration to friendliness, conversation or appetite. "Include the psychology of color in the food itself and you extend the appetite appeal," says Mrs. George. That is the theory on which she proceeded when she used yellow zinnias as a centerpiece to complement the sprightly yellow buttercups decorating her china. But even with the pretty table assembled, there's other planning necessary to make a meal a complete success. Thought must be given as to what to put with what, so that the food is well balanced, the flavors well and superbly blended and the service smooth. This was all accomplished with no visible headache to the hostess and here is Mrs. George's luncheon menu.

Luncheon Menu

Melon Supreme
Neapolitan Soup Cheese Surprises
Crab Salad Celery Seed Dressing
Butter Horns Red Raspberry Jam
Phantasy Dessert
Hot Coffee

The Melon Supreme was comprised of cantaloupe and watermelon balls on a wedge of honeydew melon, served on grape leaves from Mrs. George's own grape arbor. The Neapolitan Soup was served with whipped cream and parsley garnish. The recipes follow:

Neapolitan Soup—Combine 2 cups cream of asparagus soup (canned), 2 cups cream of mushroom soup (canned), and ½ cup milk. Add three slices of minced bacon simmered with chopped green pepper, celery and onion and a dash of savory seasoning. Garnish with whipped cream and parsley and dash of paprika and serve piping hot.

Cheese Surprises—First buy a loaf of very fresh unsliced white bread. With a very sharp knife, cut thin slices of bread when ready to use, discarding the crusts. Take 1 package of nippy grated cheese and drop one clove of garlic in the cheese for about 20 minutes. Remove garlic clove. Mince very fine, to make 1 tablespoonful, green olives, parsley and celery. Add salt, paprika, 1 teaspoon butter and 1 teaspoon salad dressing to make mixture of good spreading consistency. Be sure to spread the bread with this mixture all the way to the edges of bread slices. Roll the cheese-spread slices to firm roll. Wrap in waxed paper, then in damp cloth. Place in refrigerator for several hours. When ready to serve, cut rolls in half lengthwise; place under broiler and broil to golden brown. Serve immediately.

Crab Salad—Prepare fresh crab meat in lumps. Marinate in celery seed dressing to which a generous amount of lemon juice has been added. Serve, topped with mayonnaise, garnished with cucumber rings with rinds left on to add color, and tomato slices.

Phantasy Dessert—Select small or medium sized fresh pineapples. Leave the "feathers" on the fruit and cut lengthwise. Scoop out the pineapple meat. Fill the pineapple shells with a serving of peppermint ice cream and lime ice. Pass jugs of hot fudge sauce to pour over the ice and ice cream.

A brisk swim before breakfast puts an edge on the appetite. Miss Marie Mount, dean of home economics, Maryland University, likes swimming in the early morning and also likes entertaining guests for breakfast. She is a hostess who think breakfast guests enjoy waiting upon themselves rather than being served. Miss Mount also recognizes that everyone does not like the same "starter" for breakfast so when she entertained at a swim-breakfast recently, she had a choice of "starters," which included fruit and vegetable juices and other fresh fruits. Here is her menu:

Breakfast Menu

Peach Nectar Orange Juice
Tomato Juice Honey Dew
Fresh Figs With Cream
Black Cherries
Scrambled Eggs With Ripe Olives
Spoon Bread Blackberry Jelly
Iced and Hot Coffee Milk

The scrambled eggs were as smooth as silk and they deserve special mention. Here is the way Miss Mount made them:

Scrambled Eggs—Beat the whites and yolks of 8 eggs separately. Put into a double boiler or heavy skillet 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper as desired. Fold the beaten whites into the beaten yolks and add to mixture in utensil. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly until the mass is of cream consistency. Just before they are finished cooking, add ½ cup sliced ripe olives so they will heat well. Serve on warm platter, but not a hot one as heat toughens eggs. Too long cooking makes eggs tough, and they are then both unappetizing and indigestible. Garnish with parsley.

The Spoon Bread too was the subject of much comment. It was made according to this recipe:

Spoon Bread—Mix 1 cup white corn meal with 2 cups water. Bring slowly to the boiling point. Cook 5 minutes. Add 1 cup milk, 1 tablespoon shortening, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 well beaten eggs. Beat thoroughly and bake in a well-greased pan for 25 minutes at 400 degrees. Serve from baking dish with spoon.

There is a festive quality about a beautiful dinner party which to some women is the supreme expression in entertaining. A well-planned dinner party is a feather in any hostess' cap. Perhaps it is because an evening party setting can be more spectacular with the scintilating sparkle of glass and silver, and the soft glow of candle light. But after the scene has been created there is the matter of working out the details of food and its service—everything from the first cocktail to the last sip of coffee.

Mrs. Herbert R. Helsing is a young home maker who has a new home with many new table items to achieve lovely effects. Giving dinner parties is something that "Billie" does very deftly and smoothly. She is one who takes paper and pencili in hand and writes down her plan of action. In this way nothing comes up missing at the last moment.

Here is the menu for a dinner party for six that Mrs. Helsing gave recently:

Consomme Madriline
Ripe olives Radishes
Smothered chicken Peas
Sweet potatoes with sherry
Calavo-grapefruit salad
Rolls, peach meringue
Coffee

The following is Mrs. Helsing's recipe for making the peach meringue:

Peach Meringue—Soak ¼ teaspoon gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water and dissolve it in ¼ cup boiling water. Add ¼ cup sugar and stir until it is dissolved. Add 2-3 cup cream. When it begins to thicken, pour slowly over 2 beaten egg whites and continue beating until it is the consistency of whipped cream. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Line a mold with frozen peach ice cream and fill the center with the meringue. Pack in either ice and salt and let stand for 3 to 4 hours or pack and freeze in mechanical refrigerator.

Setting The Scene

With table setting like one above, the mood of dinner guests will be friendly. This arrangement is for three persons on either side, placing host and hostess opposite each other in center. Women sit on either side of host facing men on either side of hostess. Host and hostess can easily direct conversation. The crystal cornucopias filled with the season's colorful fruit, with low floral centerpiece, gives an interesting arrangement. A yellow damask table cloth provides further beauty by contrast of silver service plates and crystal service of Heisey's "Crystolite" pattern. The candlelight groups reflect the crystal in shimmering beauty.

Imaginative Home-Making Takes Talent

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WITH THE world so tattered and torn, there seems to be no solace anywhere but at home close to the earthy unchanging realities of life. That is why we turn a particularly sympathetic ear to home-making problems, for truly women must keep the home fires burning. Rarely in history have they been more grimly menaced.

Mrs. E. P. writes: "We're making some changes in our house and need some help. The woodwork in the living room, dining room, which I plan to paint off-white, and stairway is dark. I am having the paper removed and plan to have the walls painted. I have an Oriental type rug in the living room in jewel tones with red predominating. This could be used in the dining room and new carpeting purchased for the living room with stairway carpeting to match.

"I had planned blue walls in the living room, hall and stairway hall and peach in the dining room—the painter thinks I should reverse the colors because the dining room is brighter, but the living room is small and I should like to have it appear as large as possible. I also need new draperies for the living room. My davenport is red mohair and I have a cogswell chair which needs to be reupholstered.

White Bathroom

"The paper is being removed from the two bedrooms upstairs and the bathroom will be enameled white. I thought I might leave the woodwork upstairs dark and just have the walls repapered. One room is large with two windows on the North and three on the East. Could I use a colored ceiling to make the room darker for sleeping purposes? The other bedroom is small with two windows on the North and one on the west.

"The kitchen is ivory enamel with the doors of the cabinets and drawers varnished. I plan to have the walls white, but the painter suggests that I leave the cabinet doors and drawers as they are. I am going to get new linoleum. Any help you can give me will be greatly appreciated."

We'd have the walls of hall, living room and dining room all in the same tone—perhaps a pale robin's egg blue. Then you might buy carpeting in a textured weave of a deeper tone but still a soft harmonious blue. What about draperies in the same shade as the wall . . . in an interesting textural fabric. The cogswell chair you might upholster in a flowered material that blends in color.

Keep Old Rug

In the dining room, the same palé blue walls and draperies would be interesting with the old rug . . . the chair seats could be covered with the same flowered material you use for the cogswell chair. For accessories you could get an interesting effect with ruby glass. But if you want to introduce the peach idea, you could have accessories in peach. Woodwork in off-white would be all right though the room will seem more spacious if the woodwork is the same color as the walls.

In the bedrooms, the effect will be more tranquil if you paint the woodwork a light color. Why not have a light green ceiling for the big room . . . with side walls in a paper patterned with green leaves. This with white swiss curtains and a green valance, a white chenille spread and a light green rug would make a very restful room. In the little room you might have flowered wall paper and a light blue ceiling.

For the kitchen cabinets, we think you'd enjoy it lots more if you have cabinet doors and drawers painted white too.

Tuna Fish Helps Budget; Here's Delicious Recipe

The homemaker is needing a trick or two these days to help keep her food budget balanced. It is up to her to make the most of the fresh fruit in season, foods of moderate price and her own ingenuity as to how to prepare them in the most appealing way. Sometimes it is the flavoring of a dish that puts it in the A-1 class.

Tuna Alpine

Drain one 6-ounce can tuna fish and place, as it comes from the can, unbroken, in a well-buttered dish. Place oil drained from the tuna in a heavy skillet. Add 1 green pepper, sliced into slivers, small bit of bay leaf, 2 peppercorns, 1 clove and 1 medium-sized onion, sliced thinly. Cover and smother until onion and pepper are tender. They should not brown. Add ½ cup dry white wine blended with ½ teaspoon corn starch, and 2 fresh ripe tomatoes, peeled and cubed. Simmer for 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour over the tuna and bake slowly, 350 degrees for 15 to 25 minutes. Serve from the casserole.

Deep Dish Pies, PleasantChange Easy to Serve

The fragrance of cinnamon and apples baking in a deep-dish pie is a forerunner of something good to come. Such a pie can be made in a jiffy if a top crust of bread is used, drenched with butter, sugar and spice. Deep-dish pies in individual dishes are a pleasant change, easy to serve, easy to eat. This method is given in the recipe that follows. But if you wish you can put all your apples in one baking dish and cover them with whole slices of enriched bread—crusts removed. And fresh peaches may be used in place of apples.

Quick deep-dish pie—Combine in a saucepan 2/3 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, the grated rind of 1 lemon, 1/3 cup water and 1 2-inch stick cinnamon or ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon. Bring to boiling point; add 6 peeled, thinly sliced apples and cook slowly until fruit is clear—3 to 4 minutes. Remove cinnamon stick and transfer apples to 4 shallow individual baking dishes. With a large round cookie cutter (one with scalloped edge gives attractive results) cut a round from the center of each slice of enriched bread. Spread both sides of round with softened butter, place on top of fruit in each baking dish and sprinkle generously with sugar-cinnamon mixtures. Bake in very hot oven, 425 degrees about 10 minutes.

Corn Pudding Won't Fall If Made by New Recipe

If you are one who holds your breath every time you make corn pudding, or doesn't make it just because you're afraid it might fall, you will be glad for this new recipe that doesn't allow any calamities. The crisp, golden-brown breakfast cereals known as rice flakes are the ingredient that prevents such goings-on. The recipe for making this pudding is as follows:

Corn Pudding—Combine one No. 2 can cream-style corn with 2 slightly beaten eggs. Toss 1 cup rice flakes in 3 tablespoons melted butter, and stir into corn mixture with ½ teaspoon salt. Pour into a well-greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 minutes.

Bavarian Baked Apples

Hollywood, Calif.—Marlene Dietrich, whose "manpower" may be glimpsed in the picture by the same name, is considered one of the best cooks in the film colony. Bavarian Baked Apples is one of her specialties. Just before the apples, pared and cored in the usual way, are placed in the oven, Marlene fills the centers with an elixir made with one teaspoon of aromatic bitters and four tablespoons of honey. Then she adds a tablespoon of blanched and chopped almonds to each apple.

Veal Paprika Recipe Has Tang Of Austria

The Dalmatian peaks are even more forbiddingly remote than usual these days, what with Hitler's armaments crowding the roads. But if this month of August fills you with the urge to don gray leather shorts with flowered suspenders, and cock a little peaked cap with a feather over one eye, to respond to the sound of a Viennese waltz in such far-away place, forget it now. You know you can't complete the thought actually by tripping away, but you can get your Austrian atmosphere the harmless way with the help of the following recipe, which utilizes crispy corn flakes to make a delicious main dish.

Veal Paprika: Roll 4 cups corn flakes into fine crumbs. Cut 1½ pounds of veal steak into pieces about 1 by 2 inches, and dip into 1 egg, slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tablespoon water, and then in the crumbs. Cook 1 cut clove garlic in 3 tablespoons fat. Remove garlic, add veal and cook until lightly browned. Add ½ cup water, cover and simmer about 1 hour or until tender. Add 1 cup sour cream but do not stir. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon paprika, cover and cook about 15 minutes. Serve with noodles. Yield, 4 to 6 servings.

A Summer Cooler

Raspberry Milk—Crush 1 pint chilled red raspberries, stir in 1/3 to ½ cup sugar and few grains salt. Add 6 cups milk. Add ½ to ¾ teaspoon lemon juice and if desired press through sieve. Pour into glasses and top with whipped cream. Makes six servings.

New Pea Soup Answers Problem Of a Quick, Satisfying Dish

With the advent of cooler days, the busy housewife who rushes home from defense work or a daily bread office job is often hard put to find an easily prepared dish that will satisfy the hearty appetites of her family.

Now a famous food company has come to her rescue with a delectable pea soup. This company recently introduced Europe's split pea soup with ham hearty and homely. It is made as home cooks make pea soup; the peas are sorted, washed and simmered with four vegetables—celery, onions, carrots and potatoes—for three solid hours. The hams are cooked separately in double-jacketed kettles by steam then skimmed and boned, the meat shredded and adde to the pea soup. It is the ham that gives the smoky flavor and delicious aroma to the steaming bowl.

This lusty soup when served with bread or rolls and a green salad tossed with a sharp dressing, is a meal within itself. Chocked full of vitamins, the pea soup is appetizing as well as hunger satisfying.

New Flavor Treat

With the first pangs of hunger appeased by this nutritious soup, a more trifling food may be served as dessert. Here is a suggestion for a dessert of delicious flavor yet on the light side—apricot nectar pineapple sherbet. Serve it with some refrigerator cookies.

These two fruits bob up in an interesting way for a delectable summer sherbet. Takes us away from the well-beaten flavor track. You will like this recipe and once tried will be one to be used often.

Apricot Nectar Pineapple Sherbet—Combine ¾ cup apricot nectar, 1 cup granulated sugar and few grains salt, and heat to boiling. Remove from heat, add another ¾ cup of nectar and chill. Add 1½ cups cubed pineapple to which has been added 2 tablespoons lemon juice and stir to blend. Place in freezing tray until it starts to freeze. Beat 2 egg whites stiff and beat in 4 tablespoons sugar, a small portion at a time. Beat the chilled nectar—pineapple mixture into egg whites with rotary beater. Pour into freezing tray and place in freezing unit. Stir 3 or 4 times during freezing process. For variation, use peach-nectarine, pear, plum or peach nectar of the whole-fruit variety. Serves 6.

Diet Deficiency May Be Causing Loss of Appetite

Is your appetite on the downgrade? Perhaps it is the heat, but it also might be a deficiency in your diet. Better check up and see if your meals are including all the foodstuffs that help to produce energy and stimulate the appetite.

Ready-to-serve shredded biscuits contain Vitamin B1, which is one way to supply energy-giving food, and also the power to perk up the appetite. Two shredded biscuits with one cupful of milk will give you nearly one-half the average daily requirement of Vitamin B1. Add some fresh peaches or berries in salute to the season, and you will be well fortified with several vitamins.

If the recipe for preparing these biscuits given below doesn't waft away any summer listlessness, we give up—the heat must have you.

Sausages in Toasted Shredded Biscuits—Split 4 shredded wheat biscuits and toast them on both sides. Saute 12 small sausages and place 3 sausages between 2 biscuit slices. Spread the tops with butter and heat the biscuits in the oven, at 400 degrees. Serve with maple syrup.

Another way to serve the shredded biscuits is to toast them, make a hole in the center and insert a poached egg or scrambled one.

One Defense Strike Settled, 2 Others Begin

Settlement of the Curtiss-Wright propeller plant strike yesterday at Caldwell, N. J., will permit resumption of work on 100 million dollars of vital defense orders today, it was announced.

Meanwhile, however, work was slowed down on seven million dollars of naval construction at Pensacola, Fla., by a strike of 1000 A. F. of L. workers, and serious concern was expressed over continuance of a walk-out affecting tank parts at Buffalo, N. Y.

Termination of the week-old Curtiss-Wright stoppage was voted unanimously by A. F. of L. machinists following a plea for resumption of operations by the National Defense Mediation Board, to which the case was referred Wednesday night.

Air Field Work Halted

The Pensacola strike, involving carpenters, electricians and laborers and affecting work on additions to the Naval Air Station and flying field, was termed "in effect a strike against the United States Government," by the station's public relations office.

The president of the local A. F. of L. building and construction trades council however, said the men were not on strike but were merely taking a "holiday" pending word on demands for wage increases. The workers are employed by a private contractor, but on a schedule of wages prescribed by the Navy Department and not subject to change except by the Navy.

The strike affecting vital tank parts was at the Mack Truck Co. Details were not immediately available.

Shipyard Action Prepared

Meanwhile, steps were being taken to perfect taking over of the strikebound Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearny, N. J.

Despairing of obtaining an agreement from the company's management to accept a Mediation Board recommendation to end the dispute, Federal agencies were said to be preparing a joint statement explaining the anticipated Government occupation of the plant. The move was expected as soon as President Roosevelt returns to Washington and executes the necessary executive order.

In Chicago, mediation began yesterday on the dispute between the American railroads and their employes, who are demanding a 30 per cent increase in basic wage rates for 350,000 workers. Attempts to settle the dispute began in conferences before the National Railway Mediation Board.

U.A.W. Bars Fascists, Reds From Office

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14.—U. A. W.-C. I. O. delegates adopted tonight a superminority report excluding Communists, Nazi and Fascist members or sympathizers from holding any elective or appointive position in the union.

A roll-call vote had been ordered after President R. J. Thomas of the union declared the report of the constitution committee was approved as a standing vote. The unofficial count on the roll call was 1290 for adoption 920 against.

Three reports, majority, minority and superminority were submitted.

Delegates shouted that Thomas was "railroading" the recommendation through the convention and demanded a roll call poll. Thomas acquiesced.

The superminority report was submitted to the sixth national convention of automobile, aircraft and agricultural implement workers by Harvey Kitzman, of Racine, Wis. It read:

"No member of any local union shall be eligible to hold any elective or appointive position in this international union or any local union in this international union if he is a member of or subservient to any political organization, such as the Communist, Nazi or Fascist organizations."

A majority report asked that the constitution be amended to read as follows:

"No member or supporter of any organization whose loyalty is to a foreign government, or who supports organizations which approve totalitarian forms of government, shall be eligible to hold elective or appointive office in the international union or any subdivision thereof."

The minority amendment, in addition to disapproving Nazi, Fascist and Communist supporters from holding office, asked that members of the Socialist Party be barred on grounds that the policies of the Socialist Party are in opposition to C. I. O. policies.

Attempt Made On Baron's Life

BARON HIRANUMA

Japan Shocked By Shooting Of Hiranuma

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 14.—The attempt this morning to assassinate Vice Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, veteran Japanese statesman, guardian of imperial rule and strong man of the second and third cabinets of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, administered a profound shock to the Japanese people, who today rallied around him and his cause with the sympathies of the nation.

Immediately hearing of the news the Emperor and Empress dispatched to Baron Hiranuma their own court physician and sent a basket of fruit to the baron's home. Likewise notables of the nation, including Premier Konoye, home Minister Harumichi Tanabe and other cabinet members and the Mayor of Tokyo called to express their sympathies.

The police are now grilling the would-be assassin to ascertain not only his own motives but also all the ramifications of the plot, and since police are under Tanabe, who has always been close to Baron Hiranuma, there is no doubt they will do a thorough job of it.

For the moment the only information about the attacker is that he gave name as Neohiko Nishiyama, is 33, hails from Baron Hiranuma's home prefecture, and gained entrance to the baron's home with a letter of introduction from a man in the same prefecture. However, there is no reason to doubt that the motives of the crime were political.

The Emperor today received both Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda, who "answered questions from the throne," and Tanabe.

The press is mainly confining itself to reprinting the official communique, but Nichi Nichi denounced the assassination attempt as a "villainous, disgraceful affair."

"Direct action against individuals must be rejected at any time," it says. "It is a matter of deep regret that the attack on Baron Hiranuma should occur at a time when the whole nation is devoting itself to the problem of overcoming a difficult situation, and those at the front and the nation behind the guns are doing the utmost to accomplish a great, unprecedented task in East Asia."

The paper warns that hostile nations grouped around the United States and Britain are intensifying their activities, watching for their opportunity. For that reason, it continues, the Japanese people should be on their guard.

Tornado in Andes

Mendoza, Argentina, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The weather station at Christ of the Andes on the Argentine-Chilean border reported today that a 175-mile-per-hour tornado had blocked all communications between Argentina and Chile.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA

Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as pollens from flowers, weeds, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allo-tan, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. Allo-tan is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets.

More FOR YOUR MONEY

You get more for your money—two ways, when you buy Pepsi-Cola. More fine flavor, and more actual drink. Each Pepsi-Cola bottle holds 12 full ounces. Two good reasons why "the swing's to Pepsi-Cola." Take home the handy 6-bottle carton today.

Pepsi-Cola is made only by Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N.Y. Bottled locally by: Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Washington.

HERE'S WHY WE PRICE FRUITS AND VEGETABLES BY THE POUND

1. You can make a true comparison of values—a pound is the same everywhere.
2. Whether you shop early or late—you get the same value, for the price per pound is the same to all.
3. You can choose the exact weight and quantity you need and pay only for what you get (and no more). Buying vegetables for soup is a good example of this.
4. In citrus fruits, the juice content determines the value to you. Juice weighs heavy, pulp and skin weigh light. Therefore, regardless of size, the weight tells you the best value immediately.
5. Pricing by weight means saving for YOU, because WE can make savings which we pass along to you. For instance, tops are cut off root vegetables at the farm, saving on shipping and hauling expense; also, bunching and tying costs are saved. Then, too, our buyers can concentrate on getting the best available values instead of on sizes, to advertise at so much per each. You select the size you want, and pay according to weight.

Many prominent women tell us they would like every store in town to price all fruits and vegetables by weight. Then you could get just the amount you want, just the sizes you like, and full value for your money every time. Wherever you trade, why don't you ask your store man about it?

The defense program of the District Federation of Women's Clubs was expanded yesterday with the appointment of chairmen to the new committees on defense stamps and bonds and on soldier recreation.

Mrs. Carlton Duffus was named head of the bond committee, and Miss Ruth Madden, the recreation committee, at a meeting of the federation's advisory council at the home of Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson.

The committees will further the federation's cooperation with agencies already engaged in these two fields.

The council, which is composed of Federation officers, department chairmen and past presidents, approved appointment of a dozen other women to posts in various departments, whose heads made the nominations.

The new committee on defense stamps and bonds was set up in the department of American citizenship, which is headed by Mrs. Tilman B. Parks.

In the department of education, Mrs. Yvonne Knapp was named chairman of the recreation division, under which the soldier recreation committee was established.

Mrs. Fred S. Walker will head the committee on preschool and kindergarten, with Mrs. Lawrence Murray, vice chairman, and Mrs. Glen C. Leach and Mrs. George Corbin as members.

Mrs. Adelaide Hamilton will serve as vice chairman of the department of public welfare, with Mrs. William H. Hessick as head of the division of child welfare and Mrs. Olive Madden chairman of the division of industry. Under the public health division in this department, Dr. SeVille Coale was named chairman of the committee on cancer control.

The poetry division in the fine arts department will be headed by Mrs. Grace Kress Swiggett.

Mrs. R. L. Spire was named executive secretary of the student loan fund.

Mrs. Henry E. Ewing will head the nutrition committee in the department of the American home. Mrs. R. C. Hibben is chairman of the nursing committee.

Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, president of the federation, announced that she and other officials are working on the problem of a meeting place for the federation in the coming season, but no definite plan is yet ready to be presented.

McCarran Offers Bill to Widen Milk Importation Into D. C.

Chairman Pat McCarran of the Senate District Committee yesterday introduced a bill to permit general importation of cream into Washington, explaining that local conditions demand such action.

His measure is identical with the one offered in the House two weeks ago by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, outspoken objector to the threatened increase in milk and cream prices here.

Schulte yesterday dispatched the latest in his series of letters to Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard condemning the demand of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association for a cent-a-quart increase.

For more than a month, following public hearings on amendment of the Federal milk marketing order for this area, Wickard has been weighing the association's demands.

Squeeze Attempt Seen

Schulte wrote the Secretary he understands that the producers' association will attempt to put the squeeze on Washington milk handlers for more money on September 1, unless Wickard has acted favorably on its price demands before that time. Such action almost certainly would result in suspension of the marketing order by the Department of Agriculture.

The producers' combine tried to obtain such a voluntary increase from handlers last month, but failed.

"My information," said Schulte, "is to the effect that this association has threatened this increase in price no matter what the dairies of Washington may think or do about it, and that the Department of Agriculture will follow suit by ordering the increase shortly after the association has made of the situation an accomplished fact."

The Congressman expressed hope that Wickard will not be "stampeded into action by the wily plans" of the association but that, rather, he will take "firm action (to) put an end to the oft-recurring suspicion that this milk association can do pretty much as it pleases with your subordinates in the Department of Agriculture."

Bill Is Threatened

He reiterated his threat to offer a bill opening the Washington market to milk from distant points, as well as cream, and to demand a Congressional investigation of the local milk situation "if our governmental agencies don't stop pampering and petting the milk association and the others who are desperately trying to tighten the milk monopoly here."

Schulte also addressed a letter to OPACS Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday, urging him to confer with Wickard on local milk prices before the latter has acted on the proposed amendments to the marketing order.

Senator McCarran said that the Capital's increasing population is outstripping the milk supply, in explaining why he introduced his cream bill. The measure would enable dairymen anywhere to ship cream into the District for sale, provided it met purity standards of the United States Public Health Service.

At present no milk or cream may be sold in Washington unless the barns and herds of origin have been inspected by the Health Department.

Mrs. Burton To Be Guest Of Legion Unit

Mrs. George C. Burton, of Louisville, Ky., national vice president of the American Legion Auxiliary for the Southern division, will be the official guest of the twentieth annual convention of the auxiliary, department of Virginia, opening Sunday with a tea in Alexandria.

The Alexandria unit will give the tea at Gadsby's Tavern. Charter members of the unit, which was organized in 1918, will alternate in presiding at the punch bowls.

Mrs. James T. Preston, jr., president of the unit, is in charge of arrangements for the four-day session, which is being held in conjunction with the legion convention. Mrs. F. Clinton Knight, Mrs. C. L. Ladson and Mrs. Albert A. May form the committee for the opening tea.

Mrs. Burton, who was elected to the vice presidency at the national convention in Boston last September, is directing Legion Auxiliary activities in the Southern States this year. She joined the Jefferson unit of the auxiliary in Louisville when it was organized in 1921. Her eligibility to membership comes through the World War service of her husband, who is a former State commander of the legion in Kentucky.

In 1932 Mrs. Burton was elected president of the Kentucky Department of the Auxiliary. She represented Kentucky on the national executive committee for the year 1938-39 and also served on the national poppy committee that year, helping to direct the auxiliary's distribution of memorial poppies.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

Mrs. Amy C. Ransome, of California, second vice chairman of the National Woman's Party, who is here for the executive council meeting tomorrow, expressed satisfaction yesterday with the progress of the equal rights amendment.

"Never before have both the Senate and House Subjudiciary Committees reported the amendment favorably at practically the same time," she pointed out.

"Women were chattels when the Constitution was adopted and, except for the vote, that is their present Constitutional status," she said. "What rights they have through Federal and State legislation are not fundamental. These rights must be guaranteed by the Constitution to be safe," she added.

She explained that "our simple amendments" states that "men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

Youth, 21, Serving in Navy, Finds Separation From Sweetheart Is Clouding His Essentially Pure Love of Her With Evil Thoughts; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife often speaks admiringly of the advice and information you give in your column. As a consequence, I should like your help in replying to a request that has come to me from a young sailor. I am providing him with some general literature on the subject, but believe that any personal suggestions you may have would prove invaluable. He writes, in part:

"Since I have enlisted in the Navy, I have heard all sorts of things and my mind is pretty much confused on some things. For example, I have been going steady with a young lady whom I hope to marry some day, God willing. I am 21 and she is 19. In all of the five years I have been going with her, I have never touched her with an evil thought in mind. But now, when I see her after having been at sea for weeks and months, I find my passions hard to control. She is of the same mind that I am in this regard.

"I want to marry her; but first, I want to have some security; namely, money in the bank. We are saving and plan to be married at the end of this year. But I may be gone tomorrow and may not be back to see her again for months. I wish you would advise me on what to do,—so that whatever I do may be right. Her parents heartily approve of me and I don't want to do anything that would cause them to think badly of me . . ."

I am sending him the pamphlet, "I'm Keeping Company Now," by Father Fulgence Meyer, and advising him to talk to his parents and his confessor, who may know the individual circumstances. If you can supplement that in any way—particularly on the advisability of marrying now, or waiting—I shall forward your comment to him, and your help will be deeply appreciated. Sincerely,

H. P. L.

Place Spiritual Values Above Material Factors

DEAR H. P. L.: Now that the young man has voiced his confusion, soliciting help in composing a right course of action, there is some danger of his being belabored by so many helpfully intended, yet conflicting, viewpoints, that his confusion will be only the worse confounded. I am not familiar with the contents of the pamphlet you mention, but it is reasonable to assume its counsel applies to those who are "courting" in normal circumstances, and thus might provide little or no inspired succor for one in so desperate a dilemma.

One may sympathetically comprehend, too, that his parents probably will argue against immediate marriage—"sensibly" citing the youth of the couple, their economic unpreparedness, the uncertainty of the future (particularly for the boy), etc. Such "general literature" as you are sending him likely will expound the undeniable present and long-term value of idealistic thought and behavior, without propounding any specific, feasible solution of his perilous difficulty. And while his confessor may be the one consultant above all others who will apprehend the far reaching spiritual and sociological implications of the problem in entirety, and give him practicable suggestions calculated to bulwark his highest spiritual aspirations and moral resolutions, I have no means of knowing whether his recommendations will coincide with mine.

However, my advice to the boy is simply this: Get married immediately; which is to say, as quickly as the regulations of his church and the requirements of his vocation will permit. Let there be no further perspective-swamping delay, due to fearsome indecision. Within the framework of marriage,—of a clean cut, consecrated acknowledgement, before God and society, of his responsibility minded, wholesouled desire "to have and to hold," to love and to cherish, this girl,—all other difficulties rising out of their urgent need of mutual consolation in these distressed times can best be finely met.

As has been said, in unity is strength. And the strength of accomplished, sacrosanct unity is indispensable to these young people, if they are to keep faith alike with their feeling and their conscience, and to sustain each other loyally, with singleness and purity of heart, during the grievous days that lie ahead for them. It seems to me that whoever might argue against marriage, in this instance, for so-called "practical" reasons, would be elevating material values above spiritual values. And, ironically, just at a time in the world's history when embattled Christianity and the individual (as exemplified by this boy's darkling confusion) have unprecedentedly critical need of moral courage and spiritual reinforcement—which permeate the human consciousness through the agency of human love: tenderly, heroically and steadfastly expressed, by those who place primary dependence not upon guaranteed material security, but rather upon dynamic faith in God's power and purpose to protect those who abide by His laws.

I am emboldened to advocate marriage to this couple,—as the moral solvent of their spiritual anxiety, as well as a practical premise from which to work in sustaining each other, while coping with the individual problems which the uncertain future may bring,—by the fact that they have been sweethearts for five years, during which time, as the young man says, he "never touched the girl with an evil thought in mind." This splendid on-the-record evidence of the wholesome, durable, time-tested quality of their mutual devotion removes marriage for them, out of the dubious classification of impetuous, war-hysteria-inspired gesture of surrender to legalized sensual abandonment.

Marriage, for them, means (in my belief) the tangible expression of their normally developed and now fully realized sense of complete interdependence. Whereas, to block this vital urge toward mutually helpful unity would be to transmute their clean love, by gradual attrition, to a smouldering, demoralizing flame of fretful lust, supposing they continued to see each other during the man's brief, unpredictable, nerve-straining shore leaves. The man senses this. And it seems to me his advisers would be either blind or pious hypocrites, not to concede its human inevitability in the special circumstances, and to give him their support in preventing so tragic a denouement.

Black for Fall Features New Broken Outline

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

ALL SUMMER long women have been clinging doggedly to their cool cottons. But, comes the first breezy day in August, they immediately want to get into something black—the traditional fall color for cosmopolitan Washington.

With scarcely more than a month of summer days remaining, according to the calendar, these questions are uppermost in the local feminine mind:

Since black was introduced early in the summer, will it be high fashion for fall?

Even though there are hot days yet to come, is it too late to wear sheer black?

What type of a black dress would be appropriate for wear now and into fall and winter?

Is the basic black dress as important this fall as in other seasons?

In answer to these questions, we remind you, first, that black dresses shown for fall feature styles and fabrics different from the "summer black" dress. Your summer dress was probably a sheer with short sleeves and a V-neck of some description. Thus, even though there will be hot days to come, a sheer black dress will look like the last rose of summer when contrasted with the new fall creations. It will bear the stamp of a summer dress just as surely as one of your cottons, because fashion decrees "sheers" are hot weather fabrics. Save them for spring next year.

Broken Dress Outline

Most important in the new black silhouette for autumn is the two-piece look or the broken dress outline. Peplums, in single, double and tiered versions, as well as tunics, are high style. (They are also a camouflage for rounded hips that got out of control during the summer.) Equally important is the tunic that tapers down to a slim skirted effect.

Gathered skirts, a feature of the so-called "sophisticated" dress, are being shown in the fall version of "city black." Drapes that swathe the hips like the skirt of a Grecian goddess are also news. The dirndl dress and the front-dipping waistline are also two styles that place accent on hips.

As for the basic black dress with touches of white, it is right in the running. More emphasis, however, is put on "black with an accent of color" this season than ever before. The most popular way of adding color is by the use of bright red, green, purple, gold or blue in strapping to bring out the shoulder line and as insets on the skirt.

Other forms of trimming which have again come to light are applique, self embroidery, spangles, beads (especially all-over jet) and lace trim—both in stark black and very nude beige. In fact, the dressier a black dress is this season, the more decoration will it display. More elaborate black dresses become the "informal formal" dresses so talked of for after 5 and evening wear. Rayon crepes are the fabrics most popular for these outfits. Others come in jersey and velvet. Wear with them one of the swashbuckling profile hats or the newest level-headed chapeaux.

Peplums Are High Fashion

Suavely incorporated in the Eisenberg Original (pictured above) are practically all the "fashion first" details of elegant daytime dress for autumn. Note that it's black, and has the important "two piece look," achieved by the peplum. Note, also, the slim skirt and long fitted sleeves. Dramatized by a touch of oyster-white at the throat, this casual masterpiece of dress designing is calculated to flatter any face or figure, and to be the backlog of any daytime wardrobe

Powder Tint Should Vary With Season

By Carolyn Abbott.

A SMART WOMAN changes her beauty routine with every season.

In the late summer she reconditions her skin for luxury clothes, taking care that her tan fades evenly. She changes her face powder frequently to keep pace with the changing skin tones. The darker face powders that blend with a deep suntanned complexion look artificial on a lily-fair skin. So, she keeps on her dressing table two boxes of powder, one light and one dark. Each week she blends the two shades, making sure that she concocts a color that duplicates her skin tones. When her skin has lost all suntan and is white again, she discards the dark powder and changes to a medium or light shade with a hint of pink in it.

If she has a master make-up artist's technique, she will apply her powder so that it looks finished and natural. And never (no, never!) will she have powder smeared down the front of her dress or across the shoulders. After powdering her back and neck, she will remove the excess so that it won't glimmer through her dark dress. Also, she will remove powder from the corner of her eyes, from eyelashes and eyebrows.

When applying powder, she will use a fluffy powder puff or large piece of cotton to spread it over her face and neck. She will use an upward motion, making sure to cover the fine hair on her face. Then she will smooth away the surplus with a powder brush. With the powder brush she will brush downward, not upward, so as to make the fuzz on the lace lie flat and invisible. If there is a tiny smear or streak, she will rinse her face in cold water or swab it with skin tonic. The dash of skin tonic or cold water will set the make-up and make it last longer.

So Your Figure Is Hopeless? Here's Evidence to Contrary

By Ida Jean Kain

THE MORE hopeless you feel about your figure, the harder it is for you to get started with your slimming. You may honestly doubt that much can be done. For a psychological push in the right direction nothing beats a check-up on the other reducers—and they've been doing very well.

By some freak of coincidence, several reducers have all lost 30 pounds apiece. The report from an Oklahoman should be a real inspiration to anyone who is overweight and who feels under par.

"When I started dieting and exercising," she writes, "I weighed 180 pounds and was sick all the time. Now I am down to 150 pounds and feel grand. The exercise and diet were a great help to my health, and my looks. I used to have a 38 bust and 46-inch hips and now I can slip into a size 38 without any alterations. I am going to lose 10 more pounds and think that will be enough, as I am 5 feet 5 inches tall. And, by the way, I am 52 years old."

Her story is matched by this of a Philadelphian who writes: "On February 22 I asked for your reducing diet. On that date I weighed 141 pounds for my height of 5 feet. Today I am down to 110 pounds and feel and look fine. Now I want to know how I can keep my new figure."

Protective Foods

For all of you who want to know, the answer to that is. Base your menus on the protective foods with a few hundred calories added to bring the allowance up to your maintenance level so you neither gain nor lose. Any time you gain a pound, you have been taking more calories than you can use in energy, and should drop down a little. A small amount of exercise is necessary right along to keep your muscles in tone and to stabilize your weight.

Another Oklahoman tells us that she is still going strong: "I have had marvelous success with the balanced diet—I lost 30 pounds in three months. Now I want to lose 30 more pound. I realize this will be harder, so have you any tips?"

Restrict Liquids

Anyone who has lost that much weight in such a short while should be quite happy to slow want to lose 30 more pounds. I month for the rest of the reduction. The menus must contain all the protective elements, but the nonessentials can be left out. Sometimes it helps you to lose faster if you restrict the liquid with your meals, but be sure that you drink plenty in between.

Diplomats Travel Far And Fast These Days

Schedules of Norse and Australian Envoys Are Example; Former Will Visit Flying School for His Countrymen in Canada

By Carolyn Bell

A far cry from the tea-sipping envoy of yesterday is the streamlined modern-day diplomat. Schedules that would stagger the average person are just a matter of course in the life of today's hardworking envoy. The Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne—who has been sticking close to his desk all summer—will be off Monday to make a speech in Chicago. But an even more significant trip will be his visit to "Little Norway"—in Toronto, Canada. Here is a unique training camp—one of the largest in the world—for the Norwegian branch of the Royal Air Force.

Some 1400 miles or more will be covered by the agile Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey, on a lightning trip he is planning to the Middle West. He hopes to cover this territory—by plane of course—in two days and be back at his desk by Labor Day. Mr. Casey would like to make these frequent jaunts over the countryside in his own canary yellow plane but fears bad weather might prevent him from keeping his engagements. His ambition is to see as much of the country, and people, as possible while remaining away from Washington the minimum of time. He will leave August 30 for Muskogee, Okla., where he will speak before the American Legion, the next day. He will travel 50 miles farther to make another address in McAlester before the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Cabinet Ministers To Accompany Envoy

Accompanying the Norwegian Minister on his inspection trip of the training camp in Toronto will be two members of the Norwegian Cabinet. The two men, who have been in this country for several months, will join the Minister in Canada. They are Nils Hjelmtveit, Minister of Education, and Sven Nielsen, Minister without Portfolio. They arrived here by clipper and will go to Canada on an official visit.

Crown Prince Olav of Norway and Princess Martha visited this Norwegian colony last winter. The princess is still at the Meadows in South Dartmouth, Mass., and plans to come to Washington and to her newly-purchased house, Pooks Hill, in September. The house, which is situated in Maryland, on the Rockville Pike, will not be changed or redecorated for the present. Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, who has been summering in Long Island with her two girls, will remain there for the rest of this month.

Escape Stories Are Thrilling

A book of hair-raising adventure stories could be written about the young inhabitants of "Little Norway." Many of the boys have escaped Nazi dominated Europe by one way or another but to quote one of the attaches of the embassy "although their stories would make thrilling reading, our enemies are too much interested in the manner of escape to tell now." Some of the boys—they usually range between 18 and 20—came via Greenland, others were forced to go all the way around by way of Siberia and the Pacific.

A great number of the boys are Americans from the Middle West of Norwegian descent. One of the qualifications required, however, is that they speak Norwegian. The personnel of the camp numbers about 800. It is a complete flying unit with pilots, flight commanders, mechanics, etc. The townsfolk of Toronto are very hospitable to the young men and arrange dances and parties for them.

Recently the graduating class took an exam with members of the Canadian air force and the Norwegians came off with the top five places. The training camp was built and is maintained entirely with Norwegian funds. Often the young pilots are asked to put on stunt shows for the people of Toronto.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE BERRYVILLE Horse and Colt Show, which opened yesterday and continues through today, is the important sporting event of the week in Virginia. Among the large and well known stables competing in the many classes will be the strings of Dr. Lewis N. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney, Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee, Louie Leith, Turner Wiltshire, Ernest Redmon, U. S. Randle and Roger Bayly.

Many entertainments are being given in honor of the throngs of visitors in the neighborhood. Judges for the show include Courtland H. Smith of Middleburg and Jack Carpenter of Greenwood.

CAPT. AND MRS. Graham Dougherty have issued invitations to the wedding reception of their daughter, Mary, and Howard Wood 3d on Monday, September 1, at 5 o'clock at Woodley, the Dougherty home near Millwood and Berryville. The ceremony will take place in the historic Old Chapel, the oldest Episcopal Church west of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Only the immediate families and intimate friends will witness the ceremony owing to the smallness of the chapel.

The reception, however, will be a gala social affair. Mrs. William Bell Watkins, jr., of Winchester, will be her sister's matron of honor and the bridesmaids will include Miss Alice Grey Wood and Miss Phoebe Wood of Philadelphia, sisters of the bridegroom-to-be; Miss Alice Winslow of New York and Miss Eleanor Clark of Cincinnati.

PEOPLE WHO HAVE missed the old Warrenton Country Club, which was closed some time ago, were interested to receive invitations to become a member of the Warrenton Country Club for the season 1941-42. A group is most anxious to have the old place reopened and they found such enthusiastic response that they gave a cocktail party over the week-end at the club. There will be bridge, tennis, table tennis, croquet and all kinds of games, and it is hoped that the Warrenton Country Club will continue to have more and more members, for it is certainly one of the most attractive spots in Virginia.

MRS. Harry McCauley, of Washington, is visiting Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard at her home, Edgewood, near Upperville. Mrs. Oxnard entertained at a small luncheon earlier this week for Mrs. McCauley. Among the guests were Mrs. C. F. Rinker, Mrs. Arthur C. Marshall and Mrs. Peter B. Wood.

The duke is resting there after a tour of Canada. During his visit, accompanied by Inspector Evans of Scotland Yard, he climbed Whistlers Mountain, an 8000 feet high peak in Jasper National Park.

Besides the former Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, the duke's other guests at dinner included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Suydam Cutting, of New oYrk, and Sir Louis Greig, wing commander, R. A. F., and personal aide to the royal visitor. The duke will come to Washington in a week or so for a brief stay at the White House.

Miss Jane Biggers, who returned to Washington with her sister, will remain here until the wedding. Both are working as volunteer nurses at the Episcopal Hospital. The bride-elect is spending a good deal of time in Baltimore picking out furniture for the apartment in which she and Dr. Gardiner will live. The couple will make their home there for a year while Dr. Gardiner is at Johns Hopkins University.

Others at the luncheon, which was held at the Congressional Country Club, were Miss Kathleen Bell, Miss Kitty Clemens, Miss Ruth Hall and Miss Mary Gray.

The hostess has been living with her parents at their farm near Herndon, Va., since their Washington home on Cathedral Avenue was sold to the Swiss for use as a legation. Miss Compton plans to leave shortly for a sojourn in Oswego, Mich.

The ceremony was performed by Judge Edgar Eather and was followed by a breakfast at Pyramid Lake Ranch. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Payne, of New Vernon, N. J. Her sister, Mrs. Gurdon W. Wattles, was present at the wedding, as were the bridegroom's mother and sister, Mrs. Hilda Hellman, and Rhoda Hellman.

Mrs. Davis To Leave Today

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, of Washington, who has been in England on an inspection tour for the Red Cross, will leave today for the United States. She is expected to come back by clipper after a week in England.

At the function it was announced that Lady Louis Mountbatten, wife of King George VI's cousin, is going to fly the Atlantic soon to express to the American people the thanks of the Red Cross and the St. John War Organization for American Aid. She expects to spend about a month in this country.

The two daughters of Lord and Lady Mountbatten, the Misses Patricia and Pamela Mountbatten, are in the United States as guests of Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. The young ladies, great-great-granddaughters of Queen Victoria, have often been described as the wealthiest children in England.

May Defends Pepper, Sees 'Smear' Effort

By the Associated Press

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said yesterday that there was an apparent attempt on the part of "some members of the press" to "smear" Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida.

In a statement on a report issued Wednesday by a military subcommittee investigating a delay in the construction of Eglin Field, Fla., May declared the report included "no direct statement justifying even an implication that Senator Pepper did anything improper about the matter."

The report declared that in connection with the Pensacola (Fla.) Municipal Airport, W. E. Harkness, at that time the Florida procurement officer, was aware that Pepper, "who had nominated him for a better job," wanted an asphalt contract let to the Pan American Petroleum Corporation.

May's statement follows:

"When the attention of Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, was called to the headlines of The Washington Post in connection with a tentative report of the Subcommittee No. 1, of the House Military Affairs Committee conducting an investigation under House resolution, of the Eglin Field Army Air Base in Florida, he stated that he was surprised to know that the press had been given the information contained in a tentative report made by the investigator to Subcommittee No. 1.

"The chairman of the committee said he had made a rather hurried inspection of the report as submitted to him by the special subcommittee, and that while he was not advised as to whether the committee had made formal approval of it or not he could see no justification for the apparent effort of some members of the press to criticize, and in fact, smear Senator Pepper.

In the committee report, he says, there is no direct statement justifying even an implication that Senator Pepper did anything improper about the matter. When the bids, which were the subject of the investigation, were submitted to the procurement division of the Treasury, there was confusion as to the number of bids, as to whether or not land grant rates applied to the transportation by rail, as to the cost of trucking or otherwise transporting the materials from the railcenter to the air field, and such a number of complications that the Senator merely recommended to the Procurement Division that it was unfair to all the bidders that the contract should be awarded without further consideration and the committee, on page 9 of its report, sets forth the reasons for Senator Pepper's acts and definitely justifies them.

"The report has not yet been submitted to the whole committee and probably will not be for at least a month. As to whether it will be approved or disapproved, he does not know."

D. C. Man Among Officers Chosen By Veterinarians

Indianapolis, Aug. 14 (AP).—The election of Dr. W. W. Dimock, of Lexington, Ky., as president-elect of the American Veterinary Medical Association was announced tonight at the seventy-eighth annual convention. Dr. Dimock is an authority on the care of thoroughbred horses and head of the department of animal pathology at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. H. W. Jakeman, of Boston, who was elected at last year's convention in Washington, was installed as president.

Dr. W. Jacob of Knoxville, Tenn., dean of the Agriculture College of the University of Tennessee, was named to his twenty-fourth consecutive term as treasurer.

Newly elected officers include Dr. S. E. Hershey, Charleston, W. Va.; Dr. J. Traum, University of California, Berkeley; Dr. Mason Weadon, Washington; Dr. D. T. Simms, Auburn, Ala., and Dr. William Moynihan, Toronto, Ontorio, as vice presidents.

Ickes Indicates Gas Rationing Is Imminent for East Coast

Washington and the entire Atlantic seaboard soon may expect compulsory rationing of gasoline and other motor fuels, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes indicated yesterday.

The oil "czar" told his press conference that East Coast gasoline sales last week—after announcement of the 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. curfew—advanced 8 per cent over the preceding week.

Last night Ickes and his advisers conferred at length over means of meeting the problem and his office said an announcement of "considerable importance" could be expected today.

Ickes, in effect, admitted that the voluntary gasoline conservation plan had failed. Last week's increase in sales, he said, was 13 per cent above the corresponding week last year.

"I think," he snapped, "people are hoarding."

Pressed for details, Ickes qualified his statement.

"Well, I've heard of it in a few isolated cases," he added.

Without directly announcing that compulsory rationing would be the next step, Ickes told reporters that whatever measure of enforcing gasoline conservation is adopted it could be described as "rigid."

"The situation isn't at all clear as to what is the best thing to do," he said, just before entering the conference with his defense-gas advisers. "I'm sort of in the middle—but I've been there before."

Vacation—By Train

Ickes leaves today for "at least" a month's vacation in the West. Asked if compulsory rationing of gas could be expected before he returns, the defense petroleum head declared:

"You can speculate on that."

In line with the evident chance of immediate Federal restrictions on gas consumption, Ickes announced he had sent a personal emissary to London to study "all phases" of petroleum conservation in Great Britain.

Edwin W. Pauly, a West Coast oil executive, he said, left Washington yesterday to take a Clipper plane for England.

Referring again to the problem here, Ickes said his "rigid" enforcement program would not just include "gasless Sundays."

"That, I'm afraid, wouldn't do much good," he said.

Although it has been estimated that District gasoline sales have dropped about 5 per cent since the first of this week, Washington was included in Ickes' estimate that gas sales in Middle Atlantic States last week jumped 6.7 per cent.

He said New England went up 12.3 per cent and the South Atlantic States about 3.8 per cent.

"This," he added, "is probably due to the vacation season."

He said methods of financing the proposed 1800-mile pipeline from Shreveport, La., to the New York-Philadelphia area are still under discussion and definite plans will probably not be announced for some time.

Pipeline Delayed

This project, Ickes emphasized, could not possibly be completed in time to help the current emergency. He said some nine months would be necessary to lay the pipeline once work is started.

Ickes also reported that an American tanker left Los Angeles yesterday with 85,000 barrels of aviation gasoline for Russia.

The tanker, he said, was under American registry and is one of four currently designated to transport motor fuel to foreign powers. In addition, he said, several merchant ships have been chartered for petroleum transport purposes.

Locally, Maj. Beverly C. Snow, chairman of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee, yesterday called upon some 60,000 oil-burner owners in the metropolitan area to adopt a five-point program of heating-oil conservation. The program urges: 1—Fill tanks now. 2—Check burners for economic operation. 3—Insulate and weatherstrip windows and doors to curtail operation of burners. 4—Avoid excessive house temperatures. 5—Be sure new burners meet all requirements for efficient operation.

Members of the local oil burner trade will meet tonight at 8 p. m. in the auditorium of the Potomac Electric Power Co., to discuss plans of further conserving heating fuel.

Hit Nazis First Or Face Ruin, Knox Warns

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, asserting in an article in the current issue of Collier's that the United States has the jump on Hitler, says "the American people should demand that we keep the jump on Hitler—and jump on him first where there is any doubt about it."

"Naval and military intelligence," Col. Knox said in the article titled 'Hands Off Navy Planes,' "estimates that if Hitler wins in Europe and Great Britain his shipbuilding capacity will be at least four times our own. In addition, all Europe will become Hitler's aircraft factory. It would then be in his power to build a sea-air navy bigger than our own—bigger than anything we have planned.

"But we have the jump on Hitler—in ships and ship-based planes, in the 'know-how' of training, and most particularly, in the high morale and intelligence of our personnel."

Arguing for naval control of naval planes, Col. Knox revealed that an American naval observer was aboard the American built Catalina flying boat which spotted the German battleship Bismarck and brought her to her doom.

He said "the unanimous report of our naval observers has been that, to be effective, the naval air arm must have planes developed by the Navy for naval uses; planes flown under Navy command to attain naval objectives; planes flown by expert pilots who are Navy men with naval training.

"Our observers have expressed the belief that England's early failure to develop an independent, powerful sea-air arm has been primarily responsible for nearly every reverse suffered by Britain so far in the war at sea."

C.I.O. Asks Draft Order Be Canceled

Allen S. Haywood, director of organization for the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday wrote Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, asking the order of June 9 canceling deferments for striking workers be rescinded.

The order "bears out the position of President Murray that it establishes the Selective Service Act as a device to impair labor's rights as set forth in Federal law and generally recognized in the Nation," a statement said.

Montgomery Makes $25,000 Selling Beer Since May 1

Montgomery County, Md., realized a net profit of $10,710 last month on its monopoly of the wholesale beer business, Ralph H. Chase, general manager of the liquor control board, announced yesterday.

Since the county took over the beer business May 1 by authority of an act of the State Legislature, the total net profit has been $25,000, Chase revealed.

It was estimated at the time that the beer business would raise from $60,000 to $100,000 a year in additional county revenue. Chase expressed the opinion yesterday that these estimates would prove correct.

Net sales last month, according to Chase's report, amounted to $78,529. Operating expenses were $5,072, including $3,937 paid out in salaries.

Arthur L. Carnig, of Takoma Park, has been charged with operating a grocery store in the rear of 405 Flower Avenue in violation of county zoning laws, F. Bryne Austin, Montgomery County zoning administrator, announced yesterday.

Austin said Carnig was arrested several days ago after complaints from property owners. He is under $250 bond pending a hearing before Police Magistrate Ralph G. Shure, Tuesday, in Silver Spring.

Austin announced when he took office July 1 he would enforce zoning restrictions throughout the county. The Carnig case is the second to be taken to the courts since then.

A charge of violating zoning regulations by operating a real estate business in a residential A zone is pending against the Kensington Realty Co. This case was to have been heard Wednesday, but was continued until September 18, when it will be heard by Judge James C. Christopher at Bethesda.

The Montgomery County Board of Education has decided to retain William B. Marks as principal of the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School. It was learned yesterday. Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent, announced earlier in the summer that Marks would be transferred to the Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, as principal.

Marks has been principal at the Takoma-Silver Spring School for the last seven years. He is vice president of the Silver Spring Community Center.

Samuel R. Perritt, 40, believes in taking advantage of his opportunity, but yesterday his timing was poor. Sentenced to a year and a day for stealing $80 from the store where he worked, he thanked Justice Proctor, who sentenced him, and then said: "Judge, I'm having trouble at home, can you give me a divorce while I'm here?" The judge said, "No."

Where There's Smoke . . .

Ted Cohen, 612 L Street Northwest, a salesman, smelled something burning as he drove out Connecticut Avenue last night. Stopping near the Zoo, he discovered it was his brakes which were too tight. Before he knew it he was surrounded by eight pieces of fire apparatus and innumerable police. Somebody had seen the smoking auto, pulled a firebox.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Average Pay Clause Has Been Voided

The so-called average clause that has kept thousands of Federal employes from receiving higher salaries has been voided by the Ramspeck-Mead uniform promotion act. The clause, which has been carried in all appropriation bills for years, has had the effect of preventing an employe from being paid more than the average salary in a grade. The clause was nullified in a ruling by Comptroller General Lindsey Warren in a letter to Budget Director Harold Smith. Smith is preparing supplemental estimates to cover the cost of the pay act that will become effective on October 1 and which is expected to give pay increases to 200,000 employes the first year it's in operation.

Census Bureau is rapidly reducing its force of temporary employes. During the past three weeks 1066 employes, all card punch operators, have been separated. Today 48 employes will be given separation notices and hundreds of others will go within a few weeks. Meantime, the remaining 6300 employes are trying to wangle full Civil Service status.

Federal Bureau of Investigation field office is working its employes an average of 12 hours overtime weekly. It's a temporary arrangement because of the rush of work. Additional employes are being hired and officials hope to go back to the regular schedule of one hour overtime each day. . . . Civil Aeronautics Administration employes worked 16,655 days of overtime during the 1940 fiscal year, which is an average of 14 days per employe. The average employe also took only 20 days of annual leave. . . . State Department has closed its doors to sightseers. Employes and visitors are admitted now by pass.

Feud to Be Settled

That feud between OPM and OPACS is due to be settled soon after the President returns. For when he returns he'll have on his desk a report on the controversy and a recommendation for settlement from one of his most intimate advisers—Judge Sam Rosenman, of New York. Judge Rosenman started to work here shortly before the President left on his historic sea trip. He has interviewed defense bigwigs and it's reported he has come to a conclusion. It's whispered that the judge has been questioning officials along the line of a consolidation of some of the functions of OPM and OPACS.

The Committee for Union Democracy, the right-wingers in the United Federal Workers at the Labor Department, have at least won recognition. The committee has forced the labor local nose to take an official stand on the guilt or innocense of Helen Miller, who was fired by Secretary Perkins on Communism charges. Officially, the local will interest itself only in grievence procedure. It will not declare Mrs. Miller innocent nor will it accuse Miss Perkins of being a "union buster." However, that has already been done by U. F. W. A. officials.

The right-wingers also gained another point when the union voted to amend the constitution to permit a referendum on controversial questions. Two right-wingers were elected to office without opposition. They were Joe Clorety, first vice president, and Ann Dahlman, membership director. The union failed to censure Mary Gresham, who gave out a story that blasted the union's position on the Miller case. Apparently the left-wingers are fearful their opposition at this point would break up the union.

Civil Service wants applicants for student instructors for employment in the Army Air Corps. The jobs pay $1620 for the training period and after a person is trained he is raised to $2000 or $2600. Applicants must have had three years of college training in engineering, or in industrial education or in a vocational trade. . . . The House yesterday passed a bill which will permit the FBI to rehire some of its retired employes. . . . A Civil Service test for auto machanics has been announced. The jobs are at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. They pay $1440.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Fortune Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" at the Potomac Watergate on Thursday night. The cast:

Cho-Cho-San ..... Hizi Koyke
Suzuki ..... Charlotte Bruno
Pinkerton ..... Rolf Gerard
Sharpless ..... Mario Valle
Goro ..... Francesco Curci
Yamadori .... Richard Wentworth
Yamadori ..... Ricard Wentworth
Kate Pinkerton .... Flora Shennan
Conductor: Carlo Peroni.

For the performance of "Madame Butterfly" at the Potomac Watergate last evening a larger audience assembled than the one that greeted the San Carlo Opera Company the previous night for the opening of the week's engagement. Atmospheric conditions, while propitious in the matter of a clear sky, were not all together kindly, for a lively up-river breeze lowered the temperature almost to chilliness, made the drawing of the billowing curtains a strenuous task, and carried away occasionally some of the finer details of the music. The enthusiasm of the auditors, however, was not depressed nor was their enjoyment apparently lessened.

BROWN

Hizi Koyke gave a captivating impersonation of Cho-Cho-San, investing the role with a Nipponese charm which no Occidental singer can quite attain by the most painstaking imitation. It was in the minutiae of her acting, the grace of her movements and the naturalness of her demeanor that the winsome character became real. Her histrionic treatment of the exacting part was skillful in the gradual rise of emotional tension, as was the way in which she conserved her voice for the moments of climax. Apart from a vibrato in the entrance aria, she sang with a fine control of tone and her voice was an agreeable one to hear.

Rolf Gerard was more than adequate in the thankless role of B. F. Pinkerton, for he sang with romantic fervor when that quality was demanded. Mario Valle was thoroughly at home as Sharpless, a characterization which he always handles with a balanced combination of casualness and intensity. Charlotte Bruno as Suzuki was a good foil for Miss Hoyke, and effective in the duet scenes.

Carlo Peroni, who sacrificed part of his vacation in order to come to Washington, conducted the Puccini music admirably. He had an adequate orchestra and he saw to it that the tonal colors were applied wit hartistry. The score of "Madame Butterfly" is the most beautiful that the composer penned, and he took more pains in the details of structure and coloration than with any other of his operas. To bring these details out a conscientious conductor is required, and Mr. Peroni met that requirement with discrimination and taste.

The more one hears this score the greater is one's admiration for the economy of the resources with which Puccini produced an exotic atmosphere. It is said that he prepared for his task by sending to Tokyo for phonograph records of Nipponese music which he studied long and intently. The records must have served their purpose by saturating his mind with a musical character, for he made little actual use of native themes, but rather expressed a foreign impression in his own idiom.

Crtain incongruities in the stage setting for the first act must not be blamed upon the director of that department. It was impossible to use the company's scenic set in the orchestral shell which was too low to contain it, and a makeshift had to be devised. One regrets that another discrepancy was caused by the local law forbidding child actors. A large doll was a sad substitute for the toddling Trouble whose presence is so essential to verisimilitude.

Potomac Basin Anti-Pollution Drive Begun

An extensive interstate program for the control of pollution in the Potomac River Basin was launched yesterday at a meeting of the executive board of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

F. W. Kittrell, sanitary engineer of the Tennessee Public Health Department for the past 11 years, was named chief engineer and secretary of the commission at the meeting, and permanent offices were established in the Transportation Building here.

Both actions are subject to ratification by the whole commission at a meeting scheduled for early fall.

The interstate compact was recently authorized by Congress to include Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. All members have ratified the compact except Pennsylvania, and all ratifying members attended the session yesterday.

Although primarily concerned with river pollution, it is expected that the Commission also will deal with the related problems of flood control, water power, water supply, and recreational facilities, a spokesman said.

Kittrell is a graduate of the North Carolina State College and received his master's degree in sanitary engineering at Harvard, where he received the Herschel award for scholarship. He is a member of the Delta Omega Honorary Public Health Society. Previous to his present position he was a chemist with several industrial concerns and the North Carolina State Board of Health.

The selection of further personnel and a detailed study of the problems which the Commission will deal with will wait upon Kittrell's arrival here in October.

The fall meeting, which will be the first meeting of the full commission since May 10, also will vote on bylaws now being prepared by a committee headed by Dr. Abel Wolman, one of the Federal representatives on the board. The bylaws are expected to call for the appointment of a treasurer and to set up procedure for accepting and distributing State funds for the river projects.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland was elected chairman of the commission at the May session.

'Battle of the Hedges' Bogs Down at 12-Inch Cement Wall

A lull developed last night in the "Battle of the Hedges" between Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, and Policeman J. W. Carroll, Eighth Precinct.

Hostilities were postponed "until sometime next week" in order to allow the District surveyor's office time to prepare a report of boundaries for the police.

First shot of the fight was fired Tuesday by Patrolman Carroll when he informed Gen. Fries that a 6-foot hedge at the general's home, 3306 Woodley Road Northwest, was on public property and was higher than the 3-foot legal limit.

The general said it was on private property, and that "I'm not cutting until I do some questioning."

Before firing a second shot, Private Carroll attempted to learn from the District surveyor the extent of Gen. Fries' property, and whether the hedge was within [illegible]

The surveyor was not able definitely to establish the line of separation between public and private property at the location, but told Carroll that the general's property extended 41.9 feet from his house to the sidewalk.

But neither Carroll nor the surveyor took into consideration a 12-inch cement wall, and the question arose as to where to start to measure—on the general's side of the wall or the street side.

So the whole matter again was returned to the District surveyor's office for definite ruling.

Senate Votes War Building In Arlington

Stormy Session Concludes Weeks Of Dispute Over 'Dream' Structure

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday voted to put the War Department's "dream" building—"largest in the world"—in Arlington County, Va., but not before the chamber witnessed some bruising debate, three record votes, a quorum call and the spectacle of Republican members in almost solid support of President Roosevelt.

By its action, the Senate ended weeks of controversy over whether the 34-acre building should go up just across the Potomac River in Virginia or in the District.

A few minutes after concurring with the House which in the first place voted to appropriate 35 million dollars for erection of the structure on a 67-acre site near Arlington National Cemetery, the Senate passed and send to conference the seven billion dollar defense bill that carries funds for the building.

After all the argument, a dispute that found top Federal officials from President Roosevelt down, opposed to the project, the Senate made only one minor change in the building provision. It delegated control of the building's four million square feet of space to the Federal Works Agency.

Although the Arlington site had the backing of some of the Senate's most influential members, the margin by which it was approved was slim. A shift of five votes would have reversed the final outcome.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, led off for opponents of the Virginia site with an amendment directing erection of the building in the Capital. He was beaten 20 to 28.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, gleefully calling attention to the fact that he was following President Roosevelt, offered a second amendment to reduce the building appropriation one-half to $17,500,000.

Taft read from President Roosevelt's letter to the Senate Appropriations Committee. He relished the President's words about it being "unwise" to appropriate for a building more than one-half the size proposed by the War Department.

He lost the first time, 20 to 27. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the committee and an advocate of the Virginia site, noted from the chair the absence of a quorum.

Corridors were scoured for absent Senators. A scant quorum was rounded up. Another vote was taken and this time the score against the Taft amendment was 21 to 29.

Fourteen of the votes cast for the amendment were Republican. Only two members of the minority party, Senators Bridges, of New Hampshire, and Austin, of Vermont (Republicans), voted against Mr. Roosevelt.

By their votes, Austin and Bridges, the latter a one-time Republican candidate for President, allied themselves with such Administration stalwarts as Senators Barkley, of Kentucky, the majority leader; Pepper, of Florida; McKellar, of Tennessee, and Connally, of Texas (Democrats).

Connally Opposes Taft

Connally voted to put the building in the District, but shifted his vote to "no" on the Taft amendment. Barkley told reporters before the debate that he would "infinitely prefer" to see the building in Washington, but on the floor called some Federal edifices here "hideous" and some District schools "monstrous," complained of the absence of parking space and protested that the War Department is now scattered in 17 Washington buildings.

McCarran declared he realized that the "cards ar estacked" in favor of the Arlington site, but said he wanted the Senate to know that when it votes to remove an entire Federal agency from Washington, it is ignoring a provision of the Constitution setting aside the District as the seat of government.

Congress, he warned, stands a chance of losing control of those agencies it moves beyond the District.

Cites Dispute

Because the new National Airport, he observed, was constructed partly in the District and partly in Virginia, the whole question of police and taxing powers is in dispute between the two jurisdictions.

"Why should not the Navy Department go to Virginia, the Department of Agriculture to Maryland and the Interior Department to Nevada?" the Nevadan asked. "We'll take it (Interior Department) even with the present czar in it."

Senator Glass declared that testimony before the subcommittee demonstrated that the building was urgently needed and that if it were not built in Virginia the project would suffer delay, Glass declared:

"The Senator from Virginia had nothing to do with this undertaking until it was presented to the committee."

To the contention that there are no District sites for a building of the size planned, McCarran replied:

"You could go down and clean out enough slums in this city to make room for all the buildings we need."

Two Attack Trials Set For Sept. 8

Trial of two men indicted on rape charges Tuesday were set for September 8 by Justice James W. Morris in the District Court yesterday.

Bernard Lee Williams, 21, Negro, pleaded not guilty to a charge of a criminal attack against a 17-year-old Negro girl two weeks ago. He also pleaded not guilty to two indictments which charged that he attacked the girl and her escort with a brickbat. Saul Lichtenberber, defense counsel, agreed to consolidation of the three charges for trial.

William Isaac Robinson, 34, Negro, pleaded not guilty to a charge of attacking the 15-year-old daughter of a Government official in Rock Creek Park August 6. Since Robinson has no lawyer, Justice Morris will appoint one today to see that the man's rights are protected.

Acting District Attorney John W. Fihelly told the court that both were aggravated cases and asked that both be set for trial on the earliest date capital cases can be tried, as the Government plans to ask the death penalty for both men.

Justice Morris granted the request, observing that the date would stand unless some valid reason were given for delay.

Fihelly and District Attorney Edward M. Curran will prosecute Robinson. Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse was assigned to handle the case against Williams.

Keck Shifts 9 Detectives In Shake-up

Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives, yesterday ordered nine detective sergeants from various assignments to full-time "office and emergency" duty posts, another step in an effort to increase the efficiency of the Detective Bureau.

The changes which will become effective at 8 a. m. Sunday, also include the transfer of two Negro detectives to the homicide squad. The latter appointments are the first in Police Department history.

Establishment of the full-time office duty posts was regarded as one of the most progressive steps made in recent years in the detective office. The change will relieve from periodic office duty service some 61 men who, heretofore, had to abandon their assignments while engaged in the three-day office trick.

Keck's decision came after a conference with his assistants at which time all decided on the selections to fill the jobs.

Detective Sergt. George Darnall, former chief of the homicide squad, and two homicide squad members, Detective Sergts. Dewey Guest and Fred Rawlinson were assigned to the new work. Others included Detective Sergts. Richard Cox, P. C. Wheeler, Jacob Wolf, Curtis Trammell, Norman Hodkinson and Thomas Nally.

The men will work three eight-hour shifts and will rotate every week, according to Capt. Keck. They will answer emergency calls and conduct preliminary investigations.

The detective chief said that the office men, releived of all other assignments, will render reports of their preliminary investigations to him and to the detective sergeant who later receives the assignment.

Under the old system, Keck asserted, a detective assigned to a murder or robbery case, would have to suspend activities while he served his turn at office duty. By the time he was able to pick up his assignments again, the case was cold, Keck said.

Assigned to the homicide squad to fill the vacancies left by the transfer of Guest and Rawlinson, were Detective Sergt. Reuben Nichols and Precinct Detective Sam M. Scott, both recently promoted.

Keck indicated that at least two other men will be named to the homicide squad in the near future.

D. C. Police To Get Boot, Also Boost

House Group Will Recommend Increase Of 100, Denounce Force's Inefficiency

A House appropriations subcommittee last night was scheduled to recommend today a 100-man increase in the Metropolitan Police force, but, in the same breath, to denounce the department as inefficient.

The action was decided upon, it was understood, in a closed session of the deficiency subcommittee yesterday. It will be reported to the full committee in a meeting at 11:30 a. m. today. The full committee is expected to report favorably to the House a bill, introduced by Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, to appropriate money to pay salaries of the additional police.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, subcommittee chairman, declined to reveal details of the decision, but suggested its tenor when he told reporters:

"The subcommittee is sympathetic to the problem of giving Washington a good police force."

He likewise hinted at criticism of the department by stating:

"You might also say that many members of the subcommittee believe that it takes more than men to make a good police force."

Woodrum also indicated that the House may take immediate action on any bill the full committee might report when he pointed out that such a measure could be called up at once under the rules.

From other sources, it was learned that the subcommittee decided the police force should be increased by 100 men and planned to couple this recommendation with criticism of the department.

With Inspector Edward J. Kelly, who takes over today as acting Metropolitan superintendent, sitting before them as witness, members of the subcommittee were understood to have criticized personal jealousies in the department and failure of authorities to assign more uniformed policemen to beats.

Members attending the meeting, including the full committee chairman, Representative Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, were represented as being gravely concerned over what they believe to be a crime crisis here.

Cochran and Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, whose police investigating subcommittee also recommended increasing the force, appeared before the subcommittee with Kelly.

Brown Leaves, Kelly Heads Police Today

Without ceremony, Maj. Ernest W. Brown shook hands with his office force, assistants and his successor and quietly walked out of office as superintendent of Metropolitan Police.

When Maj. Brown left his office late yesterday for 67 days' accumulated leave, he closed the door on 45 years' police service, the last seven of which were spent as chief.

Brown's retirement is scheduled to become effective November 1, at the expiration of his leave. Today he will depart for Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. He is president of the association and will submit his retirement request before the delegates.

Inspector Edward J. Kelly, named Brown's successor by the Commissioners last week, said farewell to the retiring major immediately after returning from Capitol Hill, where he spent the day pleading with the House Appropriations Committee for 100 additional policemen.

Kelly was understood to have told the subcommittee that, in his opinion, the Police Department needs 350 more men, including the 83 provided for in the 1942 appropriations Act. He said that 40 new police should be Negroes.

Kelly will take up his new duties this morning.

Steam Scalds Two Workmen At Power Plant

Two workmen at the new Buzzards Point power plant were recovering at Casualty Hospital last night from burns received yesterday when scalding steam inadvertently was released into a boiler which they were cleaning.

The victims, George J. Flanigan, 19, and James Bondi, 25, both of 1732 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, suffered first and second degree burns to their entire bodies. A third workman, Warren J. Fraser, also of the above address, was near enough to an exit and leaped to safety.

Police reported that the injured men were two of a dozen cleaning the interior of a new 90-foot boiler being installed by the Combustion Corporation of New York. The new unit, it was said, is connected to several old boilers still in use.

Flanigan, Bondi and Fraser were working in one of three compartments of the boiler when Edwin L. Ford, a chemist for the Potomac Electric Power Co., turned a valve on one of the old boilers, not knowing that a temporary steam line passed into the new one.

Live steam blistered the men before the steam could be shut off. The men working in the other two compartments were uninjured.

Flanigan and Bondi were reported improved last night.

Harry Content, Financial Genius, Dies in New York

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Harry Content, 80, who helped build some of America's financial empires, died tonight in his Waldorf-Astoria Towers home after a three-day illness.

Holder of a New York Stock Exchange seat since 1885, he headed H. Content & Co., which aided in forming the United States Steel Corporation. In a merger, the firm became Content, Zuckerman & Co.

In 1901, after the late J. Pierpont Morgan had merged the Carnegie Steel interests with other companies to form United States Steel, Content was chosen to introduce the common shares on the market. In 1926 he bought control of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad for the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad and the banking firm of Speyer & Co.

Windsor and Wife Reported Soon To Visit D.C.

New York, Aug. 14 (INS).—Arrangements have been completed for a visit to Washington and possibly New York by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, probably en route to Canada, it was learned here today.

Official announcement of the visit of the former King of England and his American-born wife, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, will be made in a few days in Washington.

There is expected to be an official reception for the couple at the White House. The Duke of Kent, Windsor's younger brother who recently flew to Canada from England, is expected to be on hand for this reception. (The Duke of Kent is due to reach Washington August 24).

Air Crash Kills British Supply Chief in U. S.

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Aug. 14.—The Right Hon. Arthur Blaikie Purvis, 51, head of the British Supply Council in North America, has been killed in the crash of a transatlantic plane at a British airport, the Royal Air Force ferry command announced tonight.

PURVIS

An undisclosed number of other persons, all members of the ferry command, were killed or injured in the same crash.

A brief statement announcing the death of the Montreal industrialist indicated other casualties in the crash of what was described as "a returning transocean aircraft."

"All other passengers," the announcement said, "were members of the ferry command and their names and those of the crew will be published as soon as possible."

There was no indication how many were killed or injured in the crash.

Purvis, 51, was given the vast job of supervising British purchases in the United States in November, 1939.

In recognition of his work he was made a member of the British Privy Council last December and a month later was made head of the British Supply Council in North America.

Before the war, he was president and managing director of Canadian Industries, Ltd., a post he had held since 1924 with the exception of a period beginning in 1936 when he was chairman of the National Employment Commission formed by the Ottawa Government to deal with unemployment and relief.

He was married to the former Miss Margaret Jones, of Jamestown, N. Y.

Purvis born in London was of Scottish and English extraction. His parents died when he was 13, and he went to work for the British Transvaal and General Finance Co. for the equivalent of $2.50 a week.

When the company failed he obtained a job with a steamship company operating between London and the Near East and in the next four years familiarized himself with the import and export business.

His ability drew the attention of Sir Harry McGowan, who later became head of the Imperial Chemical Industries.

As an employe of McGowan's company, Purvis earned the reputation of "master salesman" in South America and Africa.

During the World War, Purvis was assigned to buy all available acetone, a chemical essential to high explosives, in the United States. In 1924 he moved to Montreal as president of the Nobel-du Pont subsidiary of Canadian Explosives Limited.

He effected a merger of concerns manufacturing explosives under the name of Canadian Industries Limited, which was developed into a 50-million-dollar business.

Then he became a director of the Bank of Montreal, the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada, the British-American Oil Co., the Consolidated Paper Corporation, Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., General Motors Corporation, the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Co. and the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada. He was a governor of McGill University.

MILT DAVIS TO PICK USO PIANISTS. Rainbow Room's maestro, Milton Davis, has been appointed to pass on the talents of pianists who aspire to play for the USO. As one of Washington's most expert pianists, organists and novachordists, Milton will be a fine judge of the capabilities of candidates for USO diversion niches. The auditions will take place at Central High School next Monday at 8:45 p. m. Candidates must be able to read music at sight and accompany, while entertainment specialties will also be given weight in the selections. We'd say that a bit of "boogie woogie" would come in handily . . . Ray Richardson, one of Meyer Davis' star saxaphonists, has just joined the Rainbow Room band. He plays in the Wayne King manner.

A new show policy starts at the Neptune Room this evening. Don Baker and his Musicomics will present revues of their dizzy comic specialties at 10, 11:30 and 12:30 each evening. The shows will include such whackeroos as Don's "Fire House Song," Joe Botchy's opera burlesque. There'll be continuous music between shows, but in a less hectic vein.

SCHAFER TO PITCH FOR KAUFMAN. The Casino Royal's Jack Schafer, who also plays in the Capitol Theater orchestra, will wave the baton at the Capitol on the week beginning August 21. It's part of the scheme for Jack, Max Zinder and Morgan Baer to each lead one week at the Capitol during Maestro Sam Jack Kaufman's three-week vacation. We have a feeling that Sam Jack's last words to Jack will be, "Now don't you go singing anything about Bessie or ants while I'm away." . . . Around September 1 Jack is due to resign at the Capitol and devote full time to the Casino Royal, presenting his songs and trumpet specialties at both diner and supper shows.

MARY AND BUDDY REJOIN LOTUS. Mary La Marr and her swing songs are now back with Bill Strickland's band at the Lotus. This is pretty nice, for Mary has a special touch with syncopation . . . Other Lotus good news is that singer Buddy Shaner will rejoin Lotus in about a week, after an extended vacation.

MIRACULOUS FINDS. A diamond dropped from a ring worn by Kathleen O'Dea, of Anchor Room's "We Two" the other day. She started searching, but with no expectation of finding it. And, lo! the stone sparkled right up at her from under the Anchor piano . . . The losing streak pursued "We To" and next day Bob Kissinger lost his wallet but found it on the running board of his car.

The Dancing Debs, one of the prettiest and cutest girl duos in show business, opened on the Shoreham Terrace last evening, will probably continue over next week.

GLEN ECHO QUINTETTES IN OFFING. Paul Kain, Glen Echo's leader, has been struck with the idea of combining his five fine singers into a quintet. They're rehearsing now and results promise to be splendificent. The group will include Paul, Adele Van, Jimmy Nichols, Dick Leith and Bob Seidell. All are topflight singers and their voices combine extremely well.

PAINTING PROGRESS LESSON. The new wall paintings to be installed at the Plymouth can either be painted in the spot or completed in an outside studio. The management is considering having them painted in the restaurant, figuring that patrons will enjoy watching the progress of the work.

GOODGYE DEAR, I'LL BE BACK IN 30 MONTHS" is being played daily in the Hi Hat in compliment to Dennis Calvert, Manager Oscar's popular assistant. Dennis has just received a couple of notes from the draft board suggesting that he take his physical tests and it looks as though he'll be going to Camp Lee soon . . . Vincent de la Garza, the singing bridegroom of the King Cole Room, also expects to go to camp about September 1.

Eileen O'Neill, of Burt's Trans-Lux has the perfect way of winding up her song sessions. She always warbles a few bars of "G'bye Now."

MAYFAIR'S SINGING CARTOONIST. Bob Roberts, singing guitarist of the Mayfair's Senators, used t be a cartoonist with the Wilkes-Barre Record when it was owned by his uncle, the late Eugene Goering. He's always kept up his interest in satiric sketching, plans to settle down in his Florida home in a few years and divide his time between fishing and cartooning.

SYD MURRAY,
notable orchestra leader who has just opened at Boulevard Farms

CARUSO ALMOST A GODFATHER. The father of Madrillon's Valentina, Eduardo Montana-Ferrari, was a great friend of Caruso, who had planned to be her godfather before he died. Opera star Tito Schips was the godfather of Valentina's younger sister, Flora.

"323" SPELLS GOOD TIMES. Restaurant "323" has many hundreds of patrons who have been lunching, dining and supping there since the place was started. For "323" has a definite individuality of its own, keyed by the cordiality of Owners Miller and Siebold, the fine music of the Heintze Brothers, the bright entertainment talents of Jane Marlow and Van Taylor. And back of the scenes is that important person, Chef Andy Miller, who makes the best lentil soup in town.

An informal Arkansas evening was celebrated recently on the Starlight Roof when a group of Arkansans foregathered fith Maestro Dick Wilson, also an Arkansan. The band played all the Arkansas tunes that ever were.

CUSTOMER APPROVED. The super-sleek rumbas played by Pete Macias' band in the Lounge Riviera, a spot always crowded with society juniors . . . The deftly executed violin solos of Bert Bernath, a truly fine musician in the Pall Mall Room . . . The jovial songs of Buddy Harmon, with Dick Koons' band in the Mayflower Lounge. Buddy's been in the Lounge since it opened, is more popular then ever . . . The jungle drumming of Barney King with Don Baker's Musicomics in the Neptune Room.

'GALE CALLS COLLEGIATES. Rodd Raffell's modernistic music at the Nightingale acts like a magnet on collegiates. On any evening you'll see scads of Georgetown U. undergrads, also lads from Georgetown Prep—young men who really know and appreciate the best in 1941 rhythm.

Survivors, beside her husband, are one son, Job Barnard; a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Blakesley, and one granddaughter. Mrs. Barnard lived at 1430 Euclid Street Northwest.

Movies of Battle's Roar To Train U. S. Troops

Army photographers, engineers and ordnance experts are cooperating to produce a training film which will familiarize American soldiers with the noise of the battlefield.

The film is to be made at the Aberdeen, (Md.) Proving Ground, according to a War Department announcement, and will include the sound of bomb explosions, machine gun fire and shells hitting a medium tank. The latter noise, the Department says, "will be recorded from within the tank."

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Tucker, Old D. C. Resident

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Rice Tucker, who was one of Washington's oldest residents, will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at Holy Comforter Church, 1357 East Capitol Street. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery. She was 91. She died Wednesday in Providence Hospital after a fall in her home, 1328 A Street Southeast.

Mrs. Tucker was born on the site of the present old House Office Building. Her parents also were natives of the District, having been born near the same site. She was the widow of John F. Tucker, music dealer.

Mrs. Tucker is survived by a sister, Miss Mary A. Foy; four nieces, Mrs. Harry Colliflower, Mrs. Daniel Cox, Mrs. Ethel LeCarpentier and Mrs. Fred Clarke, and three nephews, Edward and Fred Rice and John Foy, all of Washington.

NOVA CONFIDENT OF BEATING LOUIS

New York, Aug. 14.—Pardon us if we are a bit incoherent this morning, because we've just been talking to Lou Nova, and we don't know yet whether he's Mr. Ego, or just plain tetched. He's going to beat Joe Louis on the night of September 19 with his cosmic punch and dynamic balance.

POVICH

"After I win Louis' title," says Nova, as if it were in the books and quite unthinkable that he shouldn't beat Louis, "I will tell the public more about dynamic balance. As soon as I read the book Prof. Walston Crocker Brown is writing about dynamic balance, I'll be in a better position to give all the demonstrations."

Strange guy. For the benefit of the fight writers at Stillman's Gym today, Nova put on a five-minute dynamic balance act. As far as we could see, it was some vigorous calisthenics with a weird sort of cadence and five minutes of watching the screwey business did something to the watcher. Some sort of a spell was just about to come over us when Nova quit his gyrations.

"This is the first time I've ever showed anybody what dynamic balance is," said Nova. "Don't think I'm a screwball. There's a lot in this. The fight writers used to say I was clumsy and awkward a couple of years ago, and maybe I was. But look at me now. I'm perfect. That's what rynamic balance did for me."

Challenger Is in Good Shape

In embarrassed detachment from it all, Nova's manager, Ray Carlen, refused to have any truck with his man's exhibition in the gym. Carlen admits Nova is a strange character. "He's not phoney, though," Carlen hastened to say. "He believes all this stuff, and it's done him a lot of good. He never was in better shape in his life."

At that, Nova is something of a trial to Carlen. Lou's a handsome sort of guy, and for years Carlen has been trying to glamorize him as the Adonis of the ring. Nova won't have any of it. Nova showed up in New York this week with a full growth of beard he acquired during five weeks in the Maine woods. "I told him he had to get that stuff off his face, and he gave me an argument," said Carlen.

Finally, Nova compromised with his manager about the beard. He submitted to a mowing of his facial foliage. "And then you know what he did?" said Carlen. "The son of a gun, just to make me mad, got his head clipped, too. He came out of that barber shop with a Sing Sing haircut. He don't want to be handsome."

There is one item that Nova is concerned about, though, and it's in general line with his passion for a completely healthy body. He's scared of his eyes. He always makes careful inquiry about how his opponents use their thumbs. He doesn't want his eyes cut up. It was Nova who, last year, first proposed that all fighters wear thumbless glove.

Will Surprise Trainer by Attack

As we were saying, he doesn't think he can lose to Louis. "No, haven't got any special idea of how I'll fight him," he said. "But I do know I can lick him. If he comes in punching, I'm going to punch right back. If Ray Arcel, my trainer, heard me say that he wouldn't like it, but that's what is going to happen. Arcel will want me to box Louis, but I'm going to bang him."

Nova got his first glimpse of Louis back in 1935 when Louis was on his way up and had knocked out Lee Ramage for the second time. "I saw a couple of things about Louis that night that I've borne in mind," says Lou, "and what I've seen of Louis since makes me think I can lick him. Louis is a fine fighter, but so am I.

"My cosmic punch has improved," said Nova. "I've given it a lot of thought in the last couple of years. I used to take too much time throwing it—had to stop and think. But now it's instinctive with me. I don't have to think about getting set for it, I'm set.

"I can take a punch better than Louis. Maybe I can't punch as hard as he can, but my punches will hurt him more than his will hurt me. See how that evens it up. Louis had better watch out if he comes at me punching. I'm going to punch back. I'm going to hurt him, too, especially with my new bullet punch."

Bogart Ties Cushman for Second Place

Eddie Johnston Wins Fourth Berth; Greiner Medalist With 68-76 Rounds

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Towson, Md., Aug. 15.—The Middle Atlantic section will send another young quartet to the National Amateur Championship this year as four players averaging 21 years of age made the grade here today at the Country Club of Maryland with Otto Greiner medalist for the third straight year.

The qualifiers were:

Low scorer with rounds of 68 and 76 for 144, Otto Greiner, the 22-year old University of Baltimore graduate who was beaten in the third round last year. It will be his fourth trip.

The District of Columbia's only representative, Ralph Bogart, who at the age of 21 will be making his third journey to the big time. The husky city champion was a comfortable qualifier with 74-75—149.

The Virginia State amateur champion, 23-year-old Walter Cushman, a University of Virginia graduate from Charlottesville, with 76-73—149, who made the grade for the first time in his fourth attempt.

Youngest of Four

Fourth was the second player from the host club to make the grade and the baby of the group, 19-year-old Eddie Johnston, the Middle Atlantic junior and State collegiate champion, who will enter his senior year at the University of Baltimore next month. Johnston had 76-75—151.

All four players are sure of making the trip to Omaha for the Amateur Championship August 25-30. First alternate will be Pat Janssen, the 17-year-old youngster from Charlottesville, a potential qualifier for 27 holes until he hit a bad streak on the last nine and was out with 154, from rounds of 75 and 79.

Earle Skinker, who with Bogart carried the Washington hopes, took 40 on the first nine, including a two-stroke out-of-bounds penalty and he spent the rest of the day scrambling around, trying to get back in the running but he could not quite drop the required birdies. Football player Charley Malone, who was missing when the Redskins left Washington yesterday, took 83 blows in the morning. Ray Swearingen, of Columbia, shared the second alternate's berth with Skinker with twin rounds of 78. Bobby Brownell, tied up with a defense position, wired tournament officials he would not be on hand.

Greiner, finalist with Don O'Brien in Mamaroneck's famed Anderson Memorial Tournament last week, looked like the medalist with strokes to spare in the morning as he waltzed around in 68 strokes, two under par, and the only round of the day within speaking distance of standard figures. The course was not adept to low scoring, however.

Misses Hole-in-One

His a. m. effort included an eagle on the par-four twelfth, where he missed a hole-in-one by inches. He had two birdies and went over par twice. In the afternoon Otio scrambled with all the rest and was seven over par at one time, finishing with a 76 for the low score by five shots.

Bogart started in opposite fashion, three-putting himself seven over par for the first 12 holes, but he was two under par from there home for a morning 74, second-best round. In the afternoon round the Chevy Chase shotmaker was

Russo Limits Griffs to 3 Hits in First

Sundra Pounded In Nightcap; Evans Gets 2 Hits; Zuber Wild, Ineffective

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 14.—The Nats stirred up three runs today, all day, and took two beatings from the Yankees. They were shut out in the first game, 7 to 0, by Marius Russo, and their pennant chances virtually vanished when they lost the second game, 10 to 3.

It was something of a tie between Washington's pitching and Washington's hitting—they were both unspeakable. While the Yanks were pounding Bill Zuber for eleven hits in the first game, including a couple of superfluous homers by Tom Henrich and Charley Keller, the Nats could muster only three hits against Russo. Steve Sundra and a couple other Washington pitchers gave up 15 hits to the Yanks in the second game. The Nats made six off Atley Donald.

It wasn't much of a contest between Russo and Zuber in the first game. Zuber was wild and ineffective, and Russo was superb. Al Evans singled in the third and eighth innings, and Jimmy Bloodworth singled in the fifth and that's all the Washington hits there were.

Yanks Lead, 7-1

Sundra had no luck against his old Yankee mates in the second game, and the way he was pitching, he needed plenty. They cuffed him around for three runs in the first two innings, and when he retired at the end of the fifth, the Yankees had a 7-1 lead.

Zuber encouraged the Yanks to take a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the opening game when he walked Rolfe and Henrich. Maybe he was trying to get at DiMaggio. If he was, it was poor strategy, because DiMag belted a triple, 462 feet against the left-field wall, and the Yanks were out in front.

Henrich's triple to the right-field wall and DiMag's long fly gave the Yanks another run in the third, and finally in the seventh they banged Zuber out of the box. There were five Yankee hits in the inning. It went this way. A single by Rolfe, a home run by Henrich into the right-field stands, a single by DiMaggio, a home run by Keller into the right-field stands. Result, four more Yankee runs.

Archie Flagged Out

The Nats had one chance to avoid a shutout. Archie opened the fifth with a walk and Bloodworth singled him to third. But when Evans flied out to Henrich it was a double play because Archie was flagged down trying to score after the catch.

In the second game, after singles

Tommy Barnes Leads Nation's Qualifiers

By the United Press

A 28-year-old former caddy from Georgia set a sizzling pace Thursday as several of amateur golf's bright stars failed to make the grade in the sectional qualifying rounds that determined the field for the National Amateur championship, August 25-30, at the Omaha, Neb., Field Club.

With returns from 27 sections where 603 golfers battled for 137 places, Tommy Barnes of Atlanta was the pace-setter. He cracked out a pair of subpar rounds on the East Lake course of the Atlanta Athletic Club course and turned in an aggregate of 136 for the 36-hole qualifying round.

Barnes, now an oil salesman, had a 69, two under par, on his morning round and finished with a four-under 67.

Billows Falls

Among the casualties, the No. 1 player was Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, runner-up in the amateur to Johnny Goodman in 1938 and again in 1939 to Marvin (Bud) Ward. Billows had a 155 in the New York district which failed by two strokes to get him into a playoff for any of the remaining 14 places. However, Billows probably will be able to get into the tournament proper because many of the men who qualified indicated they will not play at Omaha.

Others who failed to win places were Sam Perry, a good amateur from Birmingham, Ala.; "Trailer" Bill Holt, of Syracuse, N. Y., and two of the Texas "Hot-Shots" Jack Munger and Reynolds Smith.

The U. S. G. A. continued the custom started last year and invited the four semifinals of the recent National Public Links tournament to play. Only two accepted me invitation but they made good. They were Champion William M. Welch, jr., of Houston, Tex., who earned the last place in his district, and Semifinalist Arthur Pomy, of Detroit, who led his district with a 145.

McCullough In

W. B. (Duff) McCullough, finalist last year against Defending Champion Dick Chapman, was second in the Philadelphia trials with a neat

Tigers Bow Twice To Chisox, 3-1, 3-0

Thornton Lee Bests Bridges in Opener; Humphries, Making 2d Start, Blanks Foes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 14.—The White Sox swept through Detroit today in both games of a double-header, 3 to 1 and 3 to 0, to run their spurt to 11 victories in their last 14 contests.

Lefty Thornton Lee shaded Tommy Bridges for his season's fifteenth win in the opener, and Johnny Humphries, making his second start of the season, shut out the Tigers with six hits in the second game.

Humphries, after pitching one-hit ball for six innings, withstood a late Detroit challenge, seven Tigers being left on the bases in the last three frames. His two-base hit scored Catcher Tom Turner, who also had doubled, for the first Sox run in the third, and Johnny himself crossed the plate on Joe Kuhel's single.

Moose Solters, playing for the first time since he suffered a slight skull fracture during fielding practice 12 days ago in Washington, singled in the other Chicago run in the sixth.

In the opener, with the score tied, 1 to 1, Kuhel, just returned from a short injury layoff, put the Sox ahead in the sixth by singling, stealing second, taking third on a bad throw and scoring on Taft Wright's fly. Mike Kreevich scored the third Sox run in the eighth when he walked and moved around on Wright's single and Luke Appling's fly.

Lee yielded eight hits to Chicago's seven off Bridges.

D. C. Legion Nine Victor In Carolina

By the Associated Press

Albemarle, N. C., Aug. 14.—Washington pushed over two runs in the last half of the tenth and nosed out Gastonia, N. C., 12 to 11, in the second game of today's double-header in the ninth regional junior American Legion Baseball Tournament here.

Harvill's single to left field sent Keithly home with the winning run after Curtis had previously singled to score Mulvihill with the tying run for the Costello Post team.

Gastonia had gone one run in front in the first half of the tenth when Vernon Petty tripled over the center fielder's head and scored on Kelly's squeeze bunt.

The game was closely contested throughout the latter innings, but Washington was never ahead until the winning run was scored in the extra innings. Gastonia was ahead 6—0 at one time, but Washington rallied in the fifth and with the aid of Lauck's three-run homer narrowed the margin.

Vernon Petty, of Gastonia, and Bill Carroll, of Washington, ace hurlers, were forced to finish the game for their respective clubs, despite the fact that both pitched full games yesterday.

Gastonia will play Baltimore tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. while Washington draws a bye into Saturday's semifinals.

Abrams-Zale Bout Considered Here

Washington is being considered as the scene of a fight between George Abrams and N. B. A. middleweight Champion Tony Zale late in September, it was revealed last night by Chris Dundee, Abrams' manager.

Zale has already expressed his willingness to meet Abrams in Washington, said Dundee. The title would not be involved, however.

Abrams, a graduate of Washington's amateur ranks, holds three decisions over Billy Soose, holder of the New York version of the world middleweight title.

Dundee refused to reveal the identity of the Washington promoter who is considering paying the $7500 guarantee demanded by Zale. "I think the match will be made for Washington," said Dundee. "I can't tell yet whether it will be held outdoors at Griffith Stadiums or indoors at the Uline Arena."

MacPhail Quiet On Expected Return of Phelps

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 14.—The usually loquacious Larry MacPhail refused to make even the slightest peep today about the statement of Brooklyn's abdicated catcher, Blimp Phelps, that he is ready to return to the Dodgers if the club asks him to come back.

The red-haired boss of the Brooklyns laughed off Phelps' argument that when he left the club the night of June 12 without permission he was a sick man and that MacPhail had hired a "spy" to check up on the catcher that night.

Earlier MacPhail had tossed off the Phelps' case with the comment that "Babe has said he intended to apply to Judge Landis for voluntary retirement, but now he is supposed to have changed his mind because he wants to help us win the pennant."

"All I can say," he added, "is that the world series cut amounts to a healthy bit of cabbage for a player."

In the other singles quarter-final, top-seeded Pauline Betz had little trouble with 16-year-old Doris Hart, Miami high school student. She disposed of the conqueror of sixth-seeded Hope Knowles, Chestnut Hill, Pa., in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4, to reach the semifinal bracket.

Major Schools to Be Represented in Post Football Clinic

Voigt, Star From Wilson, Is Entered

Coaches to Confer Today; Eastern High Scene of Two-Week Gridiron Sessions

Apparently realizing the value of getting themselves in shape early and gaining much-needed fundamentals of the grid game, Washington's schoolboys, with a huge number of entries, are indicating wholehearted support of The Washington Post's football school.

Filled-in blanks poured into The Post sports department yesterday, making youngsters from such widely separated institutions as G. W. High, of Alexandria, and Landon Prep eligible for the affair starting Monday at Eastern High's stadium.

Voigt Signs Up

For the most part entries were from grid candidates at Eastern, itself, but represented were St. John's, Western, Central, Tech, Anacostia, Paul Junior High, Calvin Coolidge, Devitt Prep and Steuart Junior High. Outstanding veteran to sign up was Charley Voigt, the Woodrow Wilson High back whom Coach Carl Heintel called his "most promising prospect" last year. He signed himself as from "Wilson—the Next Interhigh Champion."

While The Post Fotball School editor had his hands full with entries yesterday, officials of the new scholastic school were winding up preparations for the event. These have progressed so far that Coaches Sam Fox, Les Ehrlich and Jim O'Leary have scheduled a get-together today at which final plans will be made. A different aspect of the game will be taken up daily, though calesthenics will be undergone at each session. Classes will last from 4 to 6 p. m. each day, except Sunday, for two weeks.

Prizes Announced

A special incentive was given youngsters to attend The Post's school when it was announced that prizes will be distributed at "graduation." There will be no contests in passing, punting, etc., for prizes, but they will be awarded to those showing "most aggressiveness" and "most improvement."

The only requirement for entry, as previously announced, is that each candidate be 14 years of age or over. There will be no charge, a youthful lineman or back needing only a pair of shorts and gym shoes to participate. Eastern High has volunteered its showers and dressing rooms so Post school "students" may change clothes on the premises.

Rain, Indians Browns End In 3-3 Tie

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 14.—The umpires would have saved a lot of time and work if they had called the game between the Cleveland Indians and the Browns today when rain fell in the sixth inning with the score tied at 2-all.

After a delay of an hour and 20 minutes, while workmen got the diamond in shape, the teams resumed the field only to have darkness end the game in a 3-3 tie after ten innings.

George McQuinn hit a home run with a man on for the Browns against Chubby Dean in the first inning. Two runners were on base when the rail fell. Bobby Feller replaced Dean after the intermission and Joe Grace, a pinch-hitter, singled for the Browns' third run.

Johnny Niggeling pitched for the Browns. Oscar Grimes hit a home run in the second inning and singled another tally across the plate in the eighth. Ken Keltner's double in the fifth drove in the Indians' other run.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Anglers Special Week-End Weather Report

Gentle to moderate southerly winds with scattered to broken clouds Friday.

Outlook for Saturday—Moderate southerly winds, mostly cloudy with afternoon showers and likelihood of local thunder squalls.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission recently announced that it now owns 664,171 acres of game and forest land, and has under contract for purchase 45,000 acres more. These woodland purchases were made possible with both State game funds and Federal Aid Funs, available through the Pittman-Robertson Act.

On this vast acreage are many mountain and meadow streams, lakes and ponds which are in need of improvement, restocking and controled management.

JACK BELL

Congress is presently so absorbed with national defense considerations and so beseiged by selfish opportunist measures masquerading under the national defense banner, that it is difficult to get consideration of constructive conservation measures at this time; such as the clean streams bill, the Superior Forest Purchase bill and the Buck-Clark bill.

Now that all objections that have come out in the open are clarified in regard to the Buck-Clark bill, it is hoped the bill shall soon receive favorable consideration, and speedy approval.

With both sources of Federal aid, available through an excise tax on sporting equipment, it will then be possible for restoration of our game and fish resources to go hand in hand. It is on lands such as Pennsylvania and other States purchase for game restoration through Federal aid funds, that there are waters in need of restoration and is not possible, only indirectly through planting the watershed with trees and shrubs, which primarily is for the benefit of game. The States generally are limited only to propagation of fish and restocking. States can only carry on this limited work through funds raised from license fees. Good fishing cannot be restored unless accompanied by efforts to improve environmental conditions, prevention of soil erosin and sound management.

We have been asked a number of times why many streams and ponds, which to all appearances are favorable habitats for fish cannot be restored by planting of fish. It is in many cases only such minute substances such as sleniun, boron, fluorin and titanium caused by soil erosion, that exert a cumulative effect on the fish and in time produces serious disorders and eventually death. Not until Federal aid is available shall States be capable of carrying out a broad restoration program for game fish.

We must constantly be on the alert to guard against selfish schemes to exploit our natural resources under the National Defense banner. We must remember the Dust Bowl, and extensive soil erosion and flood conditions all over the country, the result of panicky management and exploition of our resources during the last war.

We have just received a copy of a new book entitled "Pistol Highlights of 1940," covering 65 interesting pistol matches from Maine to Hawaii, held duirng the last year.

It will be of interest to local gun men, because it contains a summary of a pistol match held in Washington, and others nearby, in which many local experts were contestants.

The book is being distributed without charge among those interested in pistol shooting by Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., Hartford, Conn.

Cubs Pound 4 Pirate Hurlers To Win, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14. — Chicago handed Pittsburgh its fourth straight lacing today in a 6-to-2 game that saw four Pirate pitchers fail to silence the Cubs' busy bbag.

Clyde McCullough's homer—his seventh—with two aboard in the second inning chased Max Butcher from the mound and put the Cubs too far ahead for the Pirates to catch up.

The Cubs' Claude Passeau won his eleventh game, holding the Pirates to eight hits. It was his first appearance since July 26 when he injured a rib sliding into second base.

McGee Finally Gets Into Win Column as Giants Beat Braves

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 14.—Flash! Fiddler Bill McGee finally won a ball game today after losing seven straight this season and failing in every attempt he had made since last September 19.

The sturdy righthander for whom the New York Giants gave Harry Gumbert and cash to the St. Louis Cardinals early this summer pitched seven hit ball as the Terrymen nosed out the Boston Braves, 4 to 3.

All the scoring was done in the first three innings and McGee, who rated some good luck, got it. His teammates gave him two runs in the first inning on doubles by Johnny Rucker and Mel Ott and a single by Babe Young.

Then in the third Dick Bartell and Rucker, first two men up, were safe on fumbles by Al Roberge and Eddie Miller and both scored on a pair of singles by Ott and Young. This provided the winning margin and sent Johnny Hutchings to the showers.

Harris to Bench Bloodworth, Play Aderholt at 2d

Rookie Morris Aderholt now has a new status with the Nats. He's second baseman. Manager Harris announced last night that Jimmy Bloodworth would be benched against right-handed pitching and that Aderholt would replace him.

The Nats called Aderholt from their Springfield, Mass., farm two weeks ago and gave him a brief trial at third base, where he thoroughly disproved the idea he was a third baseman.

Second base has been Aderholt's position since he came into the Washington farm system three years ago from Wake Forest College. He is a left-handed hitter and batted .317 for Springfield. Bloodworth's batting failures in recent games prompted Harris to give Aderholt a try at the second-base job.

by Johnny Sturm and Charley Keller gave the Yanks a one-run lead at the outset, Cecil Travis temporarily tied the score for the Nats by belting Donald's first pitch of the second inning into the right-field stands for his seventh homer of the year. But the tie lasted no longer than the Yanks' half of the inning.

Gordon singled and then Sturm, supposedly the weakest hitter on the club, banged a homer into the right-field stands. Jake Early got an assist on the blow. On the pitch before, Early wrestled with a pop foul off Sturm's bat and lost a one-fall decision near the Washington dugout, to give Sturm a reprieve.

Yanks Score Another

The Yanks picked up another run in the fourth, when Sundra threw wild in trying to pick Gordon off first base, and in the fifth they banged him for three more runs. Rolfe singled and Sundra filled the bases with one out with passes to Henrich and DiMag. Keller thereupon fetched two runs home with a single to center and Dickey got another with a single to right.

There were signs that the Nats might stage an uproarious sixth inning rally when they scored one run on a walk to Lewis and singles by Vernon and Travis, and had the bases filled with none out after Archie drew a walk. But they gathered only one more run in the inning. It scored when Jake Early hit into a double play.

Before the ball game was over, Walter Masterson pitched another run to the Yanks in the sixth and Arnold Anderson pitched them two more in the eighth, when DiMaggio tripled to the 461-foot sign in center field. It was Anderson' third appearance as a relief pitcher in the four-game series. He knew he was in New York.

Mrs. Whitney's Spring Hope Leads Hunters at Berryville

Llangollen String Wins Six Ribbons

Margaret Cotter Rides Whitney's Winner; 15 Ribbons Won by Springsbury

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Berryville, Va., Aug. 14.—A string of horses from "the other side of the mountain" made a successful invasion of the Clarke County Horse Show's opening session as Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Spring Hope took a decisive lead for the hunter championship here today.

Moving in from Llangollen Farm at Upperville, on the opposite side of the Blue Ridge, the Whitney forces dealt a serious blow to local stables' hopes by winning six ribbons, three of them blues, as Spring Hope carried on the march that may give her the conformation title of the show.

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm of Berryville took home 15 ribbons, although only one of them is due to be an important factor in the championship awards. Most of the other Springsbury prizes came in the leading classes of the breeding division, which do not count for the tricolor.

Miss Cotter Rides Victor

Spring Hope, 11-year-old daughter of Mad Hatter, was bred earlier this season to the Whitney stallion, Bonne Nuit. Nevertheless she is continuing her show career until Madison Square Garden in November, and appears fit enough to carry on her winning ways.

Margaret Cotter, young Maryland horsewoman, had the mount on the Whitney colorbearer after her own Rocksie emerged from his van with a slight lameness after the long trip to Berryville. Rocksie's absence means that only three entries will turn up in the intended feature of tomorrow afternoon's performance, the knockdown-and-out which last year went to Eddie Talbert's Good Friday at 6 feet.

The trio of survivors includes two Whitney mounts, Blue Eagle and First Night, and Alexis Sommaripa's Tovarich.

Although Springsbury's eight horses earned the most ribbons, its dependable Big Boy carried most of the burden of honor-winning, as he took the ladies' hunters over Spring Hope and moved into the open jumping division to win the touch-and-out.

Big Boy Is First

It was in this outing that Llangollen and Springsbury split even, with Big Boy first, Mrs. Whitney's Bone Nuit second, Springbury's Billy Do third and Mrs. Whitney's First Night fourth.

Most noticeable on the list of absentees was Mr. and Mrs. Greenhalgh's highly touted Looter, whose name appeared on the prize list and was substituted for at the last moment by a stablemate, Port o' War. Reports were that Looter had turned up lame prior to the show, which means that he may not have another outing before the final test of 3-year-olds at Warrenton on Labor Day.

In the races that wound up the card, Anne Leith's veteran Swag Man took the feature, at 1¼ miles, from W. Kendrick's Mad Dash and Herman Piggott's Sir Ford. In the 5-furlong dash, A. B. Hummer's Repeat romped home over Clarence Roadcap's Timber Net and Mrs. Hunton Atwell's Bonnie Maid.

Of the two 6-furlong races, R. H. Leith's My Grand won the first and Edward Lee's Miss Mud took the second.

breezing along within a shot or two of standard figures until he took seven strokes on the fourteenth, which he said could have been a ten. Bogart insured his berth on the next three holes, hitting the pin on the fifteenth at 90 miles an hour and stopping dead for a birdie and chipping in the cup from 50 feet for a birdie on the 17th or 35th hole. He went over on the last hole for 149.

Cushman was probably the most consistent player of the day as until the thirty-fifth hole he played without benefit of making even a reasonable putt, as he had in the practice rounds. He and Greiner were playing partners, as were Bogart and Johnston, making it easy for the onlookers to follow the play.

First Trip to Tourney

Young Eddie Johnston will be making his first trip to the National Amateur but it will be his fifth National championship. He has twice played in the National Public Links championship and twice in the Intercollegiates. He, Janssen and Skinker were battling over the last nine for what proved to be the fourth berth and the home-club youngster finished best of the three for the place.

McKechnie Signs Two-Year Contract To Manage Reds

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 14.—William B. McKechnie signed today for two more years as manager of the Cincinnati Reds, 1940 world champions.

Terms were not disclosed. Baseball circles believed the canny Scot would continue to receive $25,000 a year plus a $5,000 bonus based on home attendance figures.

McKechnie came to the Reds in 1938 from Boston. The Reds won National League pennants in 1939 and 1940.

Ernie Dusek Pins Joe Cox At Turner's

Rowdy Ernie Dusek, unwittingly aided by Referee Casey Berger, managed to cool Joe Cox off after 29 minutes of the cofeature wrestling bout at Turner's Arena last night before a crowded house. In the second half of the dual attraction Miss Mae Young, lately of Oklahoma, made Mrs. Elvira Snodgrass, the Tennessee hillbilly, scream "auntie" after 11½ minutes of mayhem.

Mrs. Snodgrass, unfortunately, was a victim of circumstances, for she was tired when she entered the ring against the burley Mae. By way of resume, Elvira had socked a customer, giving him a beautiful shiner, she had manhandled a referee, fought one of the wrestlers in another bout, and seconded her husband, Elmer, in the match he lost to Angelo Leone. All of this before her spot in the show!

She came into the ring against Miss Young, who weighed in at 180, draped in a faded patchwork quilt, an off-the-face model poke bonnet and wearing unlaced high-topped shoes, which she kicked off before the scuffle. At the bell she dropped the blanket and rushed to the center, knee-length black bloomers flapping in the breeze. There she was met by a punch from Mae which staggered her for the nonce. Then the two went into a slow waltz which featured hair tugging, scratching and slapping. Once Elvira clamped a leg-lock on the hefty Miss Young and snarled to her to "tell it to him!" meaning Mr. Berger. However, Mae weathered this assault and a few minutes later she pinned Elvira with a crotch hold and a body press, and Elvira did the telling.

A new wrinkle was introduced in the Dusek-Cox script. After some desultory maneuvers, the referee pulled Cox off Ernie when they became enmeshed in the ropes and Joe jumped out of the ring, claiming Dusek had given up. It took a deal of persuasion to get Joe back in for he contended he was getting too old to fight battles he had already won.

In the prelims Pat Fraley topped the Green Hornet in 18½ with a crotch hold and body press, and Milo Steinborn and Legs Grobmier battled to an unpopular draw.

Irked at Low Bids, Owner Stops Sales

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 14. Thomas Piatt, breeder from Lexington, Ky., set a precedent at tonight's yearling sales when he requested the auctioneer, "Doc" Bond, to discontinue the sale of his consignment because of the ridiculously low prices which his horses were bringing.

After watching 13 horses bring $6,150 for an average of $627, Piatt decided to withdraw the remaining 16 head which made up the consignment, reducing the evening's sale to 34 head.

It was the first time in the years of auction sales at Saratoga that a breeder has withdrawn his horses while the sale was in progress.

Barnes Leads Amateur Scores

145 while other prominent qualifiers were Frank Strataci, former public links champion now a private in the Army; Skip Alexander, Duke University Star, and Jim Oleska, New York detective who hits the ball cross-handed.

A total of 150 players will participate in the tournament proper.

Of interest to District golfers, Benno Janssen, eldest of the Charlottesville, Va., brother combination, qualified in Pittsburgh with a 151 at Oakmont as Pat, his younger brother, failed at Baltimore with a 154. He will be the first alternate.

Low scorer in Philadelphia was Frank Allan, of Pittston, Pa., well known in the District, with a 142. Steve Kovach, Pennsylvania amateur champion, qualified at Oakmont with a 149 to Skee Riegel's 154. Jack Ryerson won the only place at Syracuse, while Harry Haverstick made the grade in Philadelphia. Johnny Burke, former Georgetown intercollegiate champion, made the grade at Chicago with 154.

Jack Donohue, the Georgetown University student, who was runner-up in the District of Columbia Amateur Championship last year, barely made the grade at Omaha by tying for last place with a 161 score. Play was over the Omaha Field Club, scene of the championship proper. Donohue is a native of Omaha.

In California Ellsworth Vines, the former tennis great, was third of three qualifiers, trailing two former national public links champions, Bruce McCormick and Pat Abbott, the latter also finalist in the amateur at Oakmont.

Little Tavern Clinches Post League Title

Following a 6-5 victory over H and J Construction yesterday the Little Tavern nine, second half winner in The Washington Post-Industrial League race, will meet Heurich Brewers, first half winners, today in the first of a three-game series on the east Ellipse. Game time is 4:30.

Meanwhile Cameo Furniture ran into ill fortune after its 4-3 victory over Reliance Life, when H and J Construction forfeited its scheduled game today with Little Tavern, in which an H and J triumph would have meant that Cameo and Little Tavern tied for the second half title.

The Construction nine took a first inning lead of 4-0 in yesterday's game, but Little Tavern retaliated in the third with four runs and earned two more in the fourth.

In the Cameo-Reliance game, Cameo marked up one in the fourth and then came through in the fifth with three more, after Reliance had scored a run in the first half of the inning to tie the score.

Cameo's Woody Godfrey walked and was forced at second by Otis Printz. Schwab flied out to left field and Albert singled to center, scoring Printz and Harris. Hahn singled to center, scoring Albert.

Unable to Pay Wife $200 A Week—Louis

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Joe Louis, the heavyweight boxing champion, contended today he is unable to pay his estranged wife, the former Marva Trotter, the $200 a week alimony ordered August 1 by Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg.

Louis made the contention in a formal answer to his wife's temporary alimony petition filed before Circuit Judge George Fred Rush. The answer charged Mrs. Louis with "reckless and extravagant spending," and said $100 a week plus an income of $360 a month from her apartment building was ample for all her needs.

Joe's answer asked modification of Judge Feinberg's order and said it should not have been granted because Louis was not present in court.

Manley Handicap Taken by Brazen Hussy at Cumberland

Dashing Doe Runs Second In Feature

Glitter Girl Is Third; Winner Returns $16 Price; Witmer Is Jockey

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 14.—The Harry A. Manley Handicap, richest race to be contested at this track, drew a crowd of 10,000 and every fan in the stands was well satisfied with the caliber of the race. However, those betters holding tickets on N. Corbin's Brazen Hussy were the most satisfied for this filly came to the wire three lengths in advance of J. E. Hughes' Dashing Doe. Glitter Girl, favorite in the field of eight going 6½ furlongs, could do no better than third.

Faultlessly handled by George (Pappy) Witmer, Brazen Hussy was taken to the inside when unable to race with Dashing Doe in the opening half, responded to pressure when Witmer called on her and steered her around Dashing Doe and was going away in the stretch run. Glitter Girl closed well while being hard ridden but she was no match for the top ones.

Brazen Hussy used up 1:21 in completing the distance and rewarded her backers to the tune of $16. This was the fifth win of the year for the Corbin racer in 14 starts.

The $166.152 wagered today set a new high at Cumberland.

Clifton's Dawn, one of the most honest 2-year-olds to race around the halfers this year, made it two in a row when she raced the sprint course of about 5 furlongs in0:55 3/5 to beat Carmada and Vale Dove in first race.

Montrose, Langley Teams in Finals

Montrose and Langley Playgrounds gained the final round of the junior softball tournament sponsored by the Community Center and Playgrounds yesterday.

In the senior division, Park View downed Georgetown, 4 to 3, and Sherwood won over Columbia, 8 to 7, to advance to the finals which will be played today at 10 o'clock on the Reflecting Pool diamond.

Softball Twin Bill At Ballston Tonight

Two games of softball are scheduled tonight at the Ballston Stadium. Overnight Transportation of Baltimore, Middle Atlantic champions, will meet Senate Beer at 8 o'clock and Standard Linen will face I. B. M. in the second game.

NEW STEP disposed of I FLY early, drew out to a long lead, but was kept to pressure to withstand the bid of ODENATHUS. The latter was always closest to the leader and was wearing her down in the closing stages. BARRACA closed with good speed. I FLY was through early.

SCARLET FLAME was first to show at the start, drew out to a good lead, but was under intermittent punishment to the end. JUNE DATE, a trailer during the early stages, worked her way up between horses and was going best of all at the end. HIGH BUD forced the pace of the winner until the stretch and then weakened. INDIAN SEA closed well after suffering an early interference.

BRAZEN HUSSY, off well and saving ground in the early stages, came to the outside of the leader to take command and was kept to pressure to the end. DASHING DOE took command at once, held on willingly, but could not resist the winner. GLITTER GIRL was within striking distance throughout and had no excuses. RANDLE'S QUEEN could not seriously threaten.

BLIND BROOK, under perfect handling, saved ground when making his move and drew clear under punishment. SCHLEY BUCK took command at once, was well rated while setting the pace, but had nothing left when BLIND BROOK came through on the inside. VINNY BOY came between horses and closed with a rush. MAETAKE was well up early, but weakened. STRUMMING moved up boldly on the outside and then faltered.

BLACK CRUSADE was moved up gradually, came to the outside of the leaders and was going away at the end. TIME SCOUT, always well placed, took command briefly entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner. SKY HOSTESS was hard held when unable to get through for three-quarters, had clear sailing in the stretch, but had nothing left. CHIEF HOLLIS had speed to set the pace until the final quarter, where he tired. VESTALE was sloughed leaving the gate.

SPEED SHIP followed the pace for three-quarters, responded when asked and gradually wore FITMISS down to be going away at the end. FITMISS cut across the field sharply at the break, opened a long lead, but could not resist the winner. DARK ACE was bothered by FITMISS at the start, recovered and closed well. COUNT ME was far back early and came well in the final quarter.

Dear Al:

When speaking of the success of the current meeting, many fans overlook one of the most prominent reasons for the increased betting. In my opinion, failure of the jumping events to fill for the majority of the meeting has added many a dollar to the mutuel pool. There are more than a few fans who will not even bet on a steeplechase. I can't say that I blame them. Charlie Feltner and his son, Claude, have arranged to ship 14 horses to Marlboro for the coming ten-day meeting at that point. F

Stocks Finally Break Through on Upside; Fractional Gains Prevail in Light Trading

New York, Aug. 14.—Mild bidding for rails and scattered industrials today helped the stock market break one of the longest stalemates in the history of the Exchange.

While dealings were slack throughout, fractional gains predominated at the close and enabled the Associated Press average of 60 issues to emerge with a net advance of 0.1 of a point at 43.1, the first improvement in this composite since July 28. The upturn was far from unanimous. Of 642 stocks traded, 255 were up, 191 down and 196 unchanged.

Transfers of 415,260 shares were the smallest for any full session since July 2. They compared with 420,740 Wednesday.

Brokers credited the revival mainly to buying on the technical deduction that, in view of the lengthy drought, an oversold condition existed and a little rallying shower was more likely than otherwise.

The consensus in boardrooms was that the Roosevelt-Churchill statement of policies, drawn up at a sea conference and released for publication at 10 a. m. today, was more or less of a neutral market factor. Wall Street halted operations while the 8-point program rolled off the news tickers, but there was no pronounced speculative shift either way when the text was concluded.

Trends steadied after mid-day under leadership of the carriers as last week's freight loadings compilation disclosed a less than seasonal decline in shipments. Steels found the going a bit difficult because of forecasts of further production curtailment due to growing shortage of scrap.

A number of favorable earnings reports were helpful to sentiment but even here the sharp inroads of mounting taxes were stressed. Business items, on the whole, were satisfactory, although spreading Governmental price controls tended to dim the industrial picture somewhat.

Chrysler directors voted a dividend of $1.50 after the close, the same as paid previously, and this stock, together with General Motors, ended a minor plus sign. The Chrysler board revealed that first half net per share dropped from $7.01 in 1940 to $4.82. Taxes were a depressant and foreign subsidiary sales included last year, were omitted.

Among advancing shares were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville, U. S. Rubber, Curtiss-Wright, Standard Oil (N. J.), Anaconda and Montgomery Ward.

On the offside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Kennecott, Texas Corporation, DuPont, Sears Roebuck and U. S. Gypsum.

In the curb gains were posted for Humble Oil, American Gas, Glen Alden Coal, N. J. Zinc and Singer Manufacturing. Declines were recorded for Brewster Aero, Bell Aircraft and Niagara Hudson Power. Volume here was around 72,000 shares, versus 62,000 yesterday.

Bonds continued to travel in a narrow and irregular zone today with a mild shift toward improvement in the late dealings.

Rails, recent leaders, moved both ways and some of the best gains were marked up in the inactive group. Favorites on the plus side by fractions or more included Santa Fe 4s of '95 at 110¼, Erie 5s of '75 at 30½, Atlantic Coast Line 4½s at 63¼, Chicago & Eastern Illinois incomes at 30, Nickel Plate 4½s at 62¾ and Wabash "D" 5s at 17⅝.

U. S. Governments extended their recent recovery in the stock exchange and over the counter market.

Chrysler's Net Off Sharply at $4.82 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 14.—Chrysler Corporation reported today that its sales of automobiles and trucks increased 8 per cent in the first half of 1941 over the like 1940 period, but that its earnings fell to $4.82 a share from the $7.01 of the comparative six months.

Net profit of the corporation and its wholly-owned United States subsidiaries in the first six months of this year was $20,974,842 compared with $30,494,274 in the like part of 1940.

These earnings were based on sales of $507,966,137, including $28,432,381 of defense products in the first half of 1941. Net sales in the like 1940 period were $422,643,281.

Foreign Units Excluded

The report this year for the first time did not include earnings of foreign subsidiaries.

The first six months sales this year totaled 665,750 vehicles, compared with 614,731 in the like 1940 period.

K. T. Keller, president, said Chrysler was rapidly increasing its participation in the defense program and that it has already undertaken contracts aggregating more than 400 million dollars, "the execution of which is becoming our major manufacturing activity."

He disclosed that the corporation is engaged in making cargo ship propulsion machinery and will be ready to deliver experimental units before this month ends.

"Our engineers," he added, "are making satisfactory progress in the design and development of a 2,000 horsepower aviation engine.

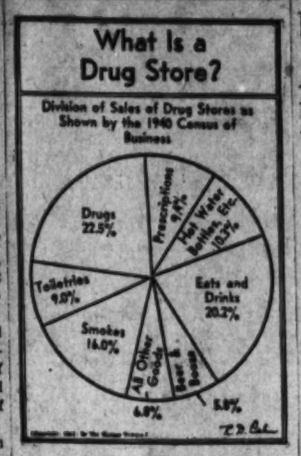
New Products Cited

"They are also developing a 500 horsepower liquid-cooled tank engine and have just completed the development of a new airplane landing gear strut.

"Extensive equipment and tooling preparation are proceeding on an anti-aircraft cannon and Martin bomber fuselages and nose pieces."

Keller predicted a rapid increase in the production of "M-3" tanks, which are being turned out from the Chrysler tank plant, now about 90 per cent equipped. Actual production began in July and Keller said capacity output would be reached by the end of the year.

Directors voted a dividend of $1.50 a share, payable September 13, to holders of record August 25. Similar payments were made in June and March.



Curtiss-Wright Net Jumps to $1.28 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 14.—Curtiss-Wright Corporation, delivering $142,272,691 of airplanes, engines and parts in the first six months of this year, reported today consolidated net profit for that period of $10,664,338, or $1.28 a common share.

This compared with $6,235,969, or 68 cents a share, in the first half of 1940.

In the first half of 1941, the company provided $6,576,009 for anticipated increases in taxes under legislation now pending.

Guy Vaughan, president of the corporation, said the unfilled orders on June 30 totaled $861,505,424, compared with $716,970,791 on January 1. The company received $286,807,324 of new orders in the six months' period.

Consolidated net profit for the June quarter was $5,784,318, or 70 cents a common share, compared with $3,821,773, or 44 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

The directors voted a dividend of $1 a share on the "class A" stock, payable September 15 to holders of record September 1. This brings payments on this class of stock to $2 this year.

Midwest Drought Reported Periling Vital Corn Crop

By the Associated Press

A new drought is taking hold in the Midwest to threaten severe damage to the vital corn corp, the Weather Bureau reported yesterday.

Describing conditions as especially unfavorable in the Eastern Ohio Valley, parts of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas, the bureau said a good general soaking rain was needed nearly everywhere outside the South, from the Great Plains eastward.

Agriculture Department officials watched deteriorating corn prospects with concern. The grain will be needed, they said, to assure success for the department's program of building up larger reserves of meat, dairy and poultry products for national defense and shipment to Great Britain.

Farm officials said that good rains in the immediate future would mitigate corn losses because much of the grain is of the heat-resisting hybrid varieties.

U. S. Food Pack Ample Except For Tomatoes

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department's "food-for-defense" program is falling far short of its production goal for vitamin-rich canned tomatoes, but officials feel confident there will be a fair supply for American consumers at prices not greatly in excess of those now prevailing.

While tomato production prospects might have been better, the outlook for other types of commercially canned vegetables—now a vital part of the winter and spring menu of most homes—is unusually good.

Pack to Increase

The department estimates that the commercial pack of 12 most important truck crops—including tomatoes, peas, beans, sweet corn, beets, kraut, asparagus and spinach—will total 138 million cases of two dozen units each compared with 116 million last year. Carryover stocks from previous years would provide a total supply of 145 million cases compared with 128 million last year.

Early in the spring, the department asked growers to expand production of tomatoes for canning by 50 per cent. It indicated the Government itself wanted an extra 15 million cases for shipment to Great Britian and for distribution through school lunch and other relief programs in this country.

A production report just issued by the department indicates an increase of only 4 per cent. Officials said the reason there was no larger increase was to be found in unfavorable weather and in the fact that the production-expansion program, with its better price guarantee for growers, was started late in the planting season.

Less British Buying

The Government no longer intends to buy 15 million cases, said E. W. Gaumnitz, assistant director of the Surplus Marketing Administration, purchasing agent for the British and for domestic relief programs. He said the British had scaled down their request and that purchases already made or contracted for would about take care of United States relief needs.

Consequently, he said, the consumer need not fear much more buying competition from the Government except for military needs.

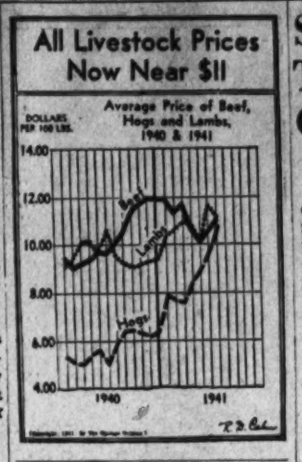
Supplies of fruits, both fresh and canned, are expected to be moderately larger than last season. On the basis of August conditions, the combined production of apples, peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, plums, prunes and apricots was indicated to be 11 per cent above that of last year and 10 per cent above average.

Crosley Reports New Steel Process

Cincinnati, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Crosley Corporation announced today development of a process whereby ordinary steel may be substituted for aluminum and special alloy steel in certain airplane parts with no added weight and in some cases a slight saving.

Lewis M. Clement, engineering director, said the process was being used on Army Air Corps contract work. Essentially, he said, it is a method of joining pieces of shaped steel so that they have the same strength as aluminum die castings or chrome molybdenum steel forgings in certain bearing assemblies.

The weight saving results from the smaller size of the steel pieces needed as compared with the aluminum or chrome molybdenum.



July Building Permits Reach 11-Year Peak

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 14.—Building permits increased sharply in July to the highest volume for any month in 11 years, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today. The increase was in contrast to the drop normally witnessed in July and stemmed directly from expanding defense construction.

The value of July permits for 215 cities was $155,939,263, the highest figure for any month since July, 1930. This compared with $138,819,086 in June and $124,497,826 in July a year ago.

Greatest gains over the same month last year were reported in the New England, South Central and Middle Atlantic States. Comparison of awards by regions follows:

Earnings Reports

Aluminum, Ltd., reported estimated net profit in the first half of this year was $8,500,000, compared with $8,100,000 in the first half of last year. Profits in the latest period, the announcement said, were after provision of $15,100,000 of profits taxes, compared with $7,700,000 in like period last year and also after special depreciation for war plants.

American Hide & Leather Co. reported for the fiscal year ended June 30 net profit of $567,922, before write-down of idle properties of $105,063, charged to earned surplus. Earnings were equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 53 cents a common share. In the preceding fiscal year net profit was $395,224, or 23 cents a common share, after write-down of $91,799 for idle properties.

Foster Wheeler Corporation reported for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $487,787, equal after preferred dividend requirements ,on which there are arrears, to $1.66 a common share. This compared with $354,876, or $1.15 a share, in the first half last year.

Sterling Products, Inc., manufacturers of medical and proprietary products, reported for six months ended June 30 net income of $5,354,042 after charges and normal Federal income taxes but before provision for excess profits taxes. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation for the quarter ended June 30 reported net profit of $1,233,718, or 67 cents a share, compared with $714,170, or 39 cents a share, in the June quarter last year.

Sugar Futures Trading Halted On N. Y. Mart

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 14.—Wall Street commodity traders and brokers suffered another cut in their domain today through a forced suspension of trading in domestic sugar futures.

Elimination of this market, "until further notice," was announced by the Coffee & Sugar Exchange in response to a request by Leon Henderson, price administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

Rubber Trade Also Stops

As a result of Federal price controls and other measures designed to lessen inflation dangers and to conserve supplies of vital materials for defense use, the New York Commodity Exchange had previously suspended futures dealings in tin, lead, zinc, copper and silk. Rubber trading came under the ban in this exchange today. It still provides a market for hides subject to price ceiling limitations.

The domestic sugar contract covers distant delivery raw sugar for ultimate consumption in the United States. Its prices broke sharply yesterday on an OPACS order establishing a ceiling of 3.5 cents a pound.

There is also a world sugar contract which involves raw supplies for distribution in foreign market in which dealings continued. This market dropped around .10 of a cent a pound today.

100 Seats Retired

The Coffee and Sugar Exchange disclosed it had appointed a committee of its members to confer with Henderson on the sugar price situation. This was at Henderson's request.

Because of the heavy shrinkage in its business under the impact of Washington's regulations, the New York Commodity Exchange decided today to buy up 100 memberships at $800 each and further reduce its personnel and physical organization. The exchange had about 800 members at the end of 1940.

In a letter to the members Edward L. McKendrew, president of the Commodity Exchange, said it planned to continue with a skeleton staff in the belief that "with the end of the emergency and a return to more normal conditions" the concern would again "fill an essential role."

Commodities Depressed

Hints that President Roosevelt would refuse official sanction to the proposed freezing of Government held cottom and wheat stocks put some pressure on the general run of commodity futures markets. Most staples traded in New York lost ground.

Cotton ended 65 to 90 cents a bale lower. The market at one time was down as much as $2 a bale. Cottonseed oil finished down .11 to .16 of a cent a pound; world sugar contract down .07 to 0.9½ cent, and cocoa unchanged to down .02 of a cent. Straits Tin, .10 of a cent. Wool tops and Santos Coffee recorded narrow gains.

Chicago wheat tumbled after an early rise of around 2 cents a bushel, closing unchanged to ¼ of a cent lower. Corn was off ⅝ to ¾.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples advanced to 90.54 per cent of the 1926 average from 90.51 per cent Wednesday.

Cleveland, Aug. 14 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. of Ohio declared today an extra dividend of 37½ cents a share on its common in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents, both payable September 15 to holders of August 30.

Pennsylvania Crude Oil Rises 23 Cents a Barrel

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—Prices of Pennsylvania grade crude oil advanced 23 to 25 cents a barrel today, the fourth increase this year and the seventh in ten months.

The new quotations, announced by the Joseph Seep Purchasing Agency of the South Penn Oil Co., were:

Bradford-Allegany $2.98 a barrel, up 23 cents; Southwest Pennsylvania $2.65, up 25 cents, and Eureka $2.50, up 25 cents.

Bradford-Allegany prices have advanced $1.13 since last November when the price was quoted at $1.85. Southwest Pennsylvania and Eureka have been boosted $1.155 in the ten months period.

The Seep Agency gave no reason for today's price increase.

Sharp Upturn Noted In Fertilizer Sales

By the Associated Press

The National Fertilizer Association said yesterday 13 of 17 reporting States showed larger fertilizer tax tag sales for July than for the same month last year and that for the 17 States in aggregate the increase was 71 per cent.

Tags were sold in the 17 States for 60,230 tons in July, 1941; 39,800 for July, 1940, and 51,630 for July, 1939.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Wheat prices jumped as much as 2¼ cents in the first half hour of trading today to new four-year peaks, May, 1942, contracts reaching 1.20⅝, but then slumped and in the final hour fell to fractional net losses for the day.

Short covering, some of which came on resting orders to stop losses, and mill and professional buying contributed to the early bulge. When this buying was exhausted, the market softened and proved unusually vulnerable to profit-taking.

Trade attention centered on the Roosevelt-Churchill statement, which was considered a factor in early short-covering, but, when it became apparent there was no unanimity of opinion about what the declaration foreshadows and when the stock market failed to show any reaction, some early buyers turned sellers.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Cotton prices swung erratically again today and finished 13 to 18 points lower.

After a firm opening the market was staggered by a rush of selling and dropped around 62 a. bale. Some observers suggested the slide resulted from misinterpretation of the joint declaration of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill with unwarranted deductions it contemplated a peace move. Other market sources, however, attributed the break to impaired technical position following yesterday's sharp rise.

Belief the President would veto the bill to free Government cotton holdings tended to bring in new selling at intervals. Trade buying was the principal support.

Listen! with Glynn

The literary endeavors of CBS foreign correspondents, whom you hear from day to day over WJSV in "The World Today" programs, continue.

The latest to make his mark in the public prints is Cecil Brown, lately of Rome, more lately of Belgrade, still more lately of Cairo, and latest of Singapore.

He's written a close-up account of his experiences, from the standpoint of one who gets blitzed, and it's to appear in the Saturday Evening Post next week under the title, "The Germans Are Coming."

Cecil left Rome several weeks ago, after broadcasting from there for almost two years from CBS. Reason was that he had some differences with Italian authorities as to what constituted facts. He then headed for Belgrade and got there a few hours before the first Luftwaffe raiders started dropping things on the Yugoslav capital. From then on he had a succession of first-hand experiences with Nazi panzer units as he tried to get out of Yugoslavia. He tells of being overtaken by tanks, emblazoned with swastikas, and of meeting German soldiers with nervous fingers over the triggers of tommy-guns—the guns being pointed at a gentleman, name of Brown. All in all, he was pretty pleased to be able to tell the story.

Incidentally, his wife, Martha, has a story called "Life in Nazified Italy" in the August Woman's Home Companion. There's evidently been a busy time in the Brown study.

Contract Bridge

With East-West vulnerable, you are sitting West and hold these cards:

♠ Q 9 8 4
♡ K 10 8
◇ 9 7 5 4
♣ A 6

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Dble.	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

Then Answer

What cal do you make?

East shows a tremendous hand by jumping to four spades after forcing you to bid when you passed originally. He believes game is possible even though you hold nothing but four spades to the queen. The extra ace and king, ten invites a slam try. Any one of several calls is satisfactory, but five clubs, showing the ace, appears best.
